Kids rap up lots of fun at Karnival

Between the rap contest and a find-the-nickel search in the straw, all the kids were getting down at the Uptown Plaza's recent Kids' Karnival. Sponsors estimate more than 1,000 kids visited the fun fair at the shopping center on the corner of Grand River and Money in Farmington. They were treated to free balloons, pony rides and face paintings.

A highlight was one of the four contests. Twenty dollars worth of pennies and $10 worth of nickels were buried in hay. Kids who plowed their way through and found a nickel received a prize. "They tore the whole thing up," said Terry Hein, who organized the event. "They had a lot of fun." That wasn't all, though. The Say No to Drugs rap contest kept kids hopping, and the Hula-Hoop competition kept things spinning. There was even a "Tell Us Why Your Mom is the Greatest" contest.

Members of the Farmington

Hills Fire Department and the Farmington Public Safety Department were on hand providing everything from fire safety tips to fingerprinting children for identification purposes.

The annual event sponsored by the Uptown Farmington Business Association continues to grow each year. Hein has been involved in the Kids Karnival for three years. He said the event goes beyond bringing exposure to the merchants in the plaza. He said it's for kids' sake.

"I'd like to see it as big as Kids Day in the Park," Hein said. "They have a great time."
