The board will likely appoint an interim superintendent to serve in a caretaker role.

Webb said the board is looking for the permanent successor to have business experience, good people skills and strong leadership qualities.

Many of 25 or so questions board members will ask next week revolve around those criteria. Interviews run 90 minutes with an opportunity for the public to ask questions.

Two people will be interviewed 6:30 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday. One person will be interviewed 8 p.m. Friday. All interviews will take place in the Board of Education office and are open to the public.

Arrangements are being made to have the interviews cablecast live, Webb said.

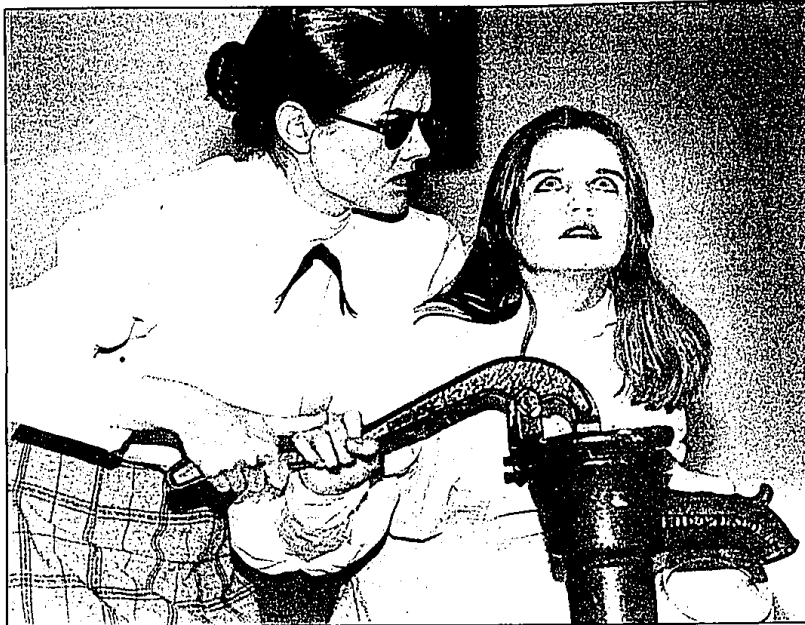

Board members prepared for the interviews Wednesday by going through a mock session with Grand Rapids Forest Hills Public Schools Superintendent J.

'We're delighted and excited with the ones we had to choose from and the ones we've invited for interviews,' said board president Cathleen Webb. 'On paper, they're highly qualified and highly recommended. It's going to be a tough decision.'

Michael Washburn. The workshop is part of the overall assistance being offered by Michigan Association of School Boards during the search.

In most cases, the people to be interviewed come from smaller districts with similar demographics with enrollments ranging from 4,000 to 6,000 students.
