

Kidney group needs help

The National Kidney Foundation of Michigan is seeking volunteers to serve as community representatives.

Duties include acting as liaison between the foundation and your community, presenting foundation educational campaigns, attending health fairs, conducting speaking engagements and coordinating fund-raisers.

No experience is necessary. Schedules are flexible. Call Michael Hart at (800) 482-1455.

It's a car: General Dynamics donated this robotic vehicle to Oakland University to be used by Oakland's department of electrical and systems engineering. Checking it out are academic vice president Gary Russi (from left), engineering dean Michael Polis, Oakland president Sandra Packard and GD head Roger Tetrault.

Wanted: Volunteers to show prospective home buyers around town.

No, the Realty association isn't seeking recruits. The Oakland County Center for Open Housing is expanding a program in its effort to see that people of all different races and ethnic groups live together in harmony, as opposed to living in their own little sections of town and seldom coming into contact.

One of the center's tools in this crusade is called the Family Volunteer Program, which was made possible by grants from the Kellogg Foundation and the Ford Motor Company Foundation.

Volunteers will be asked occasionally to give prospective home buyers a tour of their city and explain everything from the local schools to where development is occurring to the unemployment rate and per capita income.

"We have husbands and wives who do this, we have mothers and sons," said center co-director Terrie Perdue. "We try to keep it at a grass roots level where people can relate to each other."

Volunteers will be trained in the particulars of their cities as they can pass on the information to home shoppers. So far the center has 50 volunteers.

To hear more about the program, call 647-0576.
