Carr runs for U.S. Senate to boost economy

U.S. Rep. Bob Carr, D-East Lansing, announced his candidacy for the U.S. Senate Wednesday at the Metropolitan Center For High Technology, an incubator for small high-tech companies in Detroit.

"Our challenge is clear: creating economic opportunities to rebuild Michigan's economy," Carr said in a press release. "We must grow our state's economy, giving businesses, especially small businesses, a reason to choose Michigan and stay here, giving workers opportunities for careers in an ever-changing job market."

Carr joins an already crowded field of candidates hoping to replace Sen. Donald Riegle, who is not seeking re-election.

The other Democrat candidates are former U.S. congressman William Brodhead of Bingham Farms, Macomb County Prosecutor Carl Marlinga and state Sen. Lana Pollack of Ann Arbor.

The Republican candidates are Joe Arends of Troy, Jim Elsman of Birmingham, former state representative Judith Miller of Bloomfield Township, Ronna Romney of Bloomfield Hills, state Sen. Gil DiNello of Mt. Clemens and Spencer Abraham of Auburn Hills.

The Libertarian party 's putting up Jon Coon of Henderson.

Commenting on the Detroit business incubator he toured Wednesday, Carr said in his press release, "All over Michigan we are seeing entrepreneurs just like this. They are taking advantage of Michigan's diversifying economy to search for and find new opportunities, creating new jobs, opening new markets offering the promise of a new prosperity. They are economic pioneers, clearing a new path. They need our help. Our future depends on it."

Carr has been in government for almost 20 years. As chairman of the U.S. House of Representatives transportation committee, Carr has brought home a lot of bacon for Michigan in the form of transportation spending. He has been frequently praised long and hard by both Wayne County Executive Edward McNamara, a Democrat, and Oakland County Executive Brooks Patterson, a Republican.

One of Patterson's directors lamented a couple weeks ago that Carr was going to run for the Senate. He's so valuable as chairman of the transportation committee, she said, that Oakland County will really miss him.

Because Carr is running for the Senate and not the seat in congress he already holds, he will have to give up his current seat. The transporation committee will go to someone else, probably someone from a different state, no matter whether Carr wins or loses the Senate race.
