

Hills woman elected to advisory board

Sandra Berlin, a Farmington Hills resident, has been elected to The Salvation Army's Metropolitan Detroit Advisory Board.

Berlin is co-owner and corporate secretary-treasurer of the WW Group Inc., the largest franchise of Weight Watchers International worldwide.

"The Metropolitan Detroit Advisory Board is comprised of individuals who understand the needs of the surrounding community and have committed to helping the Army reach out to those in need," said Lt. Col. Clarence Harvey, Eastern Michigan divisional commander.

In addition to serving on The Salvation Army Advisory Board, Berlin is a member of several other organizations and has just been reappointed by Gov. John Engler to a third term on the Michigan Civil Rights Commission.

The Salvation Army's Metropolitan Advisory Board has served for 66 years in Detroit, and includes business and civic leaders from the metro area.

Hills man appointed to board of governors

James W. Honick, a Farmington Hills resident and vice president of marketing and leasing for Renaissance Center and senior vice president and regional manager of Ruhlhoff, has been appointed to the Board of Governors for the Detroit Metro Commercial Investment Division. Honick will serve a three-year term.

The division is a commercial real estate-based trade association affiliated with the National Association and Michigan Association of Realtors. The division provides a forum for exchange of ideas, offers networking opportunities for members, and sponsors commercial education programs, including seminars and certificate courses.

Honick has more than 20 years of experience in real estate, marketing and management. At Renaissance Center, he is responsible for all office and retail leasing and marketing functions.

He holds a bachelor's degree from Georgia State University and a juris doctor degree from Woodrow Wilson College of Law in Atlanta, Ga.

Hills physician nets service award

Dr. Gloria Kuhn, a Farmington Hills resident, has received the 1993 Ronald L. Krome Meritorious Service Award from the Michigan Chapter of the American College of Emergency Physicians.

Kuhn has practiced emergency medicine at Grace Hospital since 1991, formerly serving 12 years at Mount Carmel Hospital. She directs the teaching program for Grace's resident emergency physicians and heads the hospital's rotating internship program for first-year osteopathic medical school graduates.

A 1970 graduate of Chicago College of Osteopathic Medicine, Kuhn served an internship at Riverside Osteopathic Hospital in Trenton, and completed a residency in emergency medicine at Detroit Receiving Hospital.

She has also completed the requirements to be designated as a fellow of the American College of Emergency Physicians.

In bestowing the Ronald Krome Award, Kuhn's colleagues described her as "a tireless supporter of the Michigan College of Emergency Physicians as well as an outstanding teacher of emergency medicine residents."

Kuhn is a longtime member of the board of the Michigan College of Emergency Physicians where she currently serves as secretary and heads the board's section for education.

Department hires ex-Hills resident

The Central Michigan District Health Department has hired Dawn Lukomski, a former Farmington Hills resident, as a full-time health educator for its six-county district.

Lukomski will, among other health education activities, be responsible for coordinating and conducting the Marriage License Counseling Program and Blood-borne Pathogen Training.

Lukomski, a 1991 graduate of Central Michigan University, was originally with the health department in a temporary capacity.
