"The 40, 50 and 60 hours a week you put in, you don't think about, said Lips, currently a "Free Press" district manager. "What keeps you coming back is the story after story after story," he said. "You keep challenging them and they keep succeeding and succeeding and succeeding. The more you help the more you receive."

Volunteers needed

Team Farmington needs more volunteers in 15 sports. Volunteers don't have to be expert in the sport. Anyone who is willing to take part is welcome. They're looking for volunteers who are not parents of the athletes so that the older members will have a chance to interact with adults who will deal with them as adults.

Todorov, Lipsa and Kissinger stressed that the group has received overwhelming support from the City of Farmington Hills, City of Farmington, the school district, parents and the community. Fund-raisers sponsored by the Team Farmington

Booster Club, like Earth Day at Heritage Park, a Bowl-a-thon and concessions at the City of Farmington events have helped tremendously in buying equipment, uniforms and other costs.

Organizers are also looking for corporate sponsors to take part in various events, like Earth Day. The public is also invited to Team Farmington competitions. A softball tournament is planned for 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Farmington

City Park June 25.

"These kids in the special education program can do things others can't and skiing is a perfect example," Lipsa said. "They may not be able to read as well, but they can ski better."

"We're all challenged in some way," he added.

Call Lipsa at 855-0632 for more information about Team Farmington.

Finishing touches: Mike Vader, from East Middle School, finishes the one-mile mark as Paul Wallace, a Team Farmington volunteer track coach, cheers him on for his accomplishment.
