

Free Sample For Baby's Ills

Something can and must be done for the pining, crying baby, for the child that refuses to eat and is restless in its sleep. And since the basis of all health is the proper working of the digestive organs, look first to the condition of the stomach and bowels.

A child should have two full and free movements of the bowels a day. If constipated, the bowels are very important, as with a clear head a baby has a good appetite and sound sleep. It is equally important to know when to give the child in the emergency of constipation and indigestion. Calomel is too strong and all other purgatives are not only too strong, but they could reduce them because of its bad taste. Have you ever tried Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin? It is a liquid that families have been using for a quarter of a century. It is mild, pleasant and promptly effective. It is good for you as well as the child. It does nothing better to be found in children. They like its taste, you will not have to force them to take it.

First of all, if you have not yet used it, Dr. Caldwell would like to send you a sample bottle free of charge. It will tell you how to use it before buying. Later when you have used it, you will tell us that you are right. It is a liquid that families have been using for a quarter of a century. It is mild, pleasant and promptly effective. COST HIS SALARY TO SLEEP
Newly Elected Senator Gets Object Lesson in High Cost of Living.

A newly elected senator of the new party to Washington to arrive for the morning and had an object lesson in the high cost of living. He wanted to start "with the swim" and be at the center of things so he priced the "four all" hotel.

HIS PICTURE IN EVIDENCE
Should be Warning to Man With Weakness for Penny Arcade Photographs.

Should you feel a desire to visit a summer garden or a penny arcade and experiment by having your self photographed in a ridiculous pose, remember the fate of Horace E. Todd, candy-maker and formerly the husband of Beulah Todd.

Beulah Todd was granted a divorce last week by Judge Goodrich. She said that Todd was addicted to drink. "And the proof," the court suggested.

Beulah Todd drew from her purse a photograph of her husband. It appeared to be a photograph of Horace E. Todd, his cheeks were puffed, his hair disheveled, his collar unbuttoned and his necktie untied. In one hand he held a five-dollar bill. In the other hand, four aces. Beneath the picture there appeared this line: "A millionaire today; a tramp tomorrow."

"Is that a picture of your husband?" the court asked.

"It is."

"Divorce granted," the court decided. And Mrs. Todd, tucking the postal card safely away in her purse, walked from the courtroom.—Kansas City Star.

House Haunted? Low Rent!
When alien immigrants arrive in this country they often bring with them a stock of misapprehensions. The tenant with a ghost in a game that is being played by foreigners in various parts of the United States, and, what is more, it is being played successfully.

The newcomer takes a house, and, after one or two payments are made, complains that the premises are haunted. Quaking with superstition, he tells a tale of horror of a headless man seen stalking in the cellar, a lady in white or something invisible but glowing. Now a ghost is the average landlord's aversion. Special visitors afford splendid subjects for gossip in the neighborhood and prospective tenants seldom fail to hear and be warned off by the story.

Anxious that the report shall not get about, landlord confers with tenant, and in several such instances the result has been this—the tenant agrees to stay on, or to vacate about the matters to others and to put up with the ghost, providing the rent is substantially reduced.

Encouragement.
"Why should you be despondent?" asked the poet's friend.

"Why shouldn't I be despondent?" he retorted. "I've been sitting here for a bit of cheer to the world. I have written some things, the men who ought to know have said they were sublime. I have endeavored to describe the beauties of nature's grandeur, the gospel of brotherhood, to each kindness and goodness and hopefulness. But the people persist in ignoring me; the publishers decline to accept my poems; my genius is unrecognized; I am left to stare in my attic."

"Cheer up, old man. A hundred years from now your poems may be illustrated by some artist who will get $100 for each of the pictures."

A Maine Record.
"I think I can safely lay it to rest having hauled more wood into Rockland than any other man," says Ous-Tolmen of Rockville. "I have been at it sixty years, hauling an average of 200 loads a year with a party of seven feet to the load. I brought my first load into town behind a pair of steers in 1850 and sold it to the S. H. Lumber Co. for two dollars a cord. Kansas Journal.

LIFE ON LONELY ICELAND
People in Black Northern Country Know What's Going on in the World.

A traveler in Iceland says that he journeyed more than fifty miles from the capital, Reykjavik, and saw but two or three farms in all that distance.

"During all this time," he says in the Youth's Companion, "I had seen a single thing but a stalk of corn—holms-talls. Extinct volcanoes surrounded us on every side. Dust storms swept down from their scorched flanks. Distinct clouds of sulphur fumes from the chafers dazzled us when the sun shone upon them."

"In here, in a land where there is almost no fuel, and where every household has and turns up can be raised in the land of the midnight sun in summer and the midday moon in winter, I found books and cheerful conversation, an outlook on life, and a knowledge of current events which I have not always found in populous cities."

"There are no schools, to be sure, outside of Reykjavik and one or two small towns, for children cannot walk ten miles each way to a school-house, and even such a schoolhouse would accommodate but two or three families. But the literate (pedagogues) about farm-houses to house-carrying his store of learning with him, and leaving behind much intellectual stimulus and a desire to know what is going on beyond the bounds of the island."

"They were great chess players in the lonely farmhouse where we stayed and they were keen to play with us. Although my companion considered himself a fair chess player he was ignominiously beaten by the angular lady of the household. They had a Bible too and an Icelandic hymn book. We went away from our short visit to the lonely farmhouse of the 50s with the impression that the home life in the typical farms of Iceland might well be envied by dwellers in more favored climes."

POPE'S HEAVY MAIL BAG
His Holiness Gets Greater Number of Missives Than Any King or Executive.

If one were asked to speculate as to the sovereign whose daily mail bag was the greatest one would hazard the Kaiser. But no. Then must will say it ought to be. On an unimpeachable authority of a Paris contemporary we learn that the pope is the recipient of the greatest number of missives.

The mail of his holiness consists on the average of 23,000 letters, newspapers, etc. To go through this mass 35 secretaries are kept employed.

The president of the United States receives nearly 1,000 letters daily and about 4,000 journals and books.

The Kaiser's mail consists of 4,000 letters and frequently the same number of books and papers. Our King, we learn, is favored with 1,000 letters a day and over 2,000 newspapers and books.

The czar is not overworked in this respect for a sovereign, his majesty's mail bag averages at 600 letters, or, per day. The kings of Italy and Spain have to deal with about 300 letters each.

Queen Wilhelmina is still more favored with 150 letters, etc. But President Fallieres is still more fortunate, for we are told that he receives few letters and hardly any papers.—London Globe.

Badge of Servitude.
Would-be aristocrats in America who are wont to decorate the hats of their coachmen with cockades are probably ignorant of the fact that from a European standpoint the cockade is only used to show that the wearer is a servant of royalty. Across the water the cockade can be legally worn only by servants of royalty, including naval and military officers, diplomats, lieutenants, deputy lieutenants and high sheriffs of counties. As work by these, the blue cockade, which was introduced in England by the house of Hanover, although previous to that it had been worn in various colors. A scarlet cockade was in vogue during the time of Charles II. His son adopted white, the badge of the Jacobites, while orange was the color of William of Orange. Orange remains the color in the Netherlands. Black and white is the color of Germany, black and yellow in Australia, triangle in France, scarlet in Spain, blue and white in Portugal—that is before the revolution—and black, red and yellow in Belgium. The word "cockade" comes from the French "coquard," originally applied to the feathers of the cock worn by Cretan soldiers serving in the French army.

Chinese Will Take Part.
Dresden is planning for an exposition devoted to the cause of hygiene, sports and their allied interests. According to advance information this exposition, which hitherto has not been very much talked about, is likely to surprise by its perfection of detail and architectural beauty—as might be expected of Dresden.

"That the exposition will be worldwide in its scope is evinced by the fact that the executive committee has just received plans from the Chinese for the erection of an imposing Chinese section. It is proposed to erect a large hall for this purpose, and an imposing pagoda will be erected as a monumental contribution to the architectural development of the Chinese architecture."

AMERICAN FENCE
Made of Hard, Stiff Wire, of Highest Quality

Good Fences are a farm investment that bring the most returns for the least money

ARE you losing money? If you had a hole in your pocket, out of which you were losing hard-earned dollars, would you sew it up? The time has arrived when a fence around the farm is as much a necessity as a cultivator.

If you are feeding corn or the corn to hogs in a dry lot, allowing mud, green feed to go to waste on other portions of your farm, you have a hole in your pocket, out of which you are losing money. Sew it up.

Buy an American Fence dealer and let him show you how a few dollars invested in fence will yield a big return.

American Fence is made of hard, stiff steel. It is made of a quality of wire drawn expressly for woven-wire-fence purposes. Calculated by latest improved process—the best that the skill and experience of years has taught. Built on the elastic, hinge-joint (patented) principle, which effectively protects the stay or upright wires from breaking under hard usage.

The real test of a fence is the service you get out of it. Test, judge and compare American Fence under any and all conditions, and you will find that the steel, the structure and the galvanizing are equal in durability, strength and efficiency to the hardest usage.
