Thyroid disease is common yet many people go undiagnosed

Seven to eight million Americans have thyroid disease and 80 percent of them are women. Even though thyroid disease is more common than diabetes, more than 50 percent of people with the disease go undiagnosed. "Thyroid dysfunction: The veiled threat" is an awareness program currently being sponsored by Mercy Health Services. The Michigan Thyroid Association and Boots Pharmaceuticals. Thyroid screenings are available at the lost cost of $5 and educational seminars are offered to help participants recognize the signs and symptoms. If you want more information about thyroid disease or would like the date and time of a screening near you, call 1-800-368-2121.
