Immunization rates reviewed

In an effort to improve Michigan's childhood immunization rate, the Michigan Hospital Association recently released a bulletin asking hospitals statewide to volunteer as immunization sites.

This new initiative was developed by a volunteer task force of health-care professionals named the Alliance for Immunization in Michigan.

AIM was organized by the Michigan Osteopathic Hospital Association last spring. It now has 20 members including the MHA, state and local health departments, hospitals, physician and nurse associations, and other organizations involved in children's health. McDonald's restaurants of Michigan has also pledged its support.

Hospitals that choose to act as immunization sites will receive vaccines at no cost from the Michigan Department of Public Health. These participating hospitals will receive vaccines through their local health departments and work with them to start their own individual programs.

Hospitals will have the option of offering immunizations through their emergency departments, urgent care units, pediatric or primary care clinics, or whichever location is most appropriate based on circumstances and community need.

"AIM's initiative is the state's first coordinated effort to enlist the support of hospitals from all parts of the state," according to MHA Executive Vice President David Seaman. "The MHA is encouraging its members to participate in the program."

Hospitals that are members of AIM's work group include Botsford General Hospital of Farmington Hills; Children's Hospital of Michigan and Henry Ford Health System of Detroit; Pontiac Osteopathic Hospital; Metropolitan Hospital of Grand Rapids; and Gensys Regional Medical Center of Flint.

Encouraging hospitals to become more involved with immunization has been a primary objective of AIM since it was formed.
