LONG FIDELITY MACARONI

Customer: Shows the Grocery Clerk How It Can Be Made Up into a Small Bundle.

Into a grocery store came a man who bought a number of things, all of which he wanted to take with him; there were all things of small bulk and they would have made a comparatively small bulky bundle but for a package of macaroni. This was strange, but it was long and it would cover the whole bundle. The clerk didn't see how he could do anything about that.

"Oh, yes, you can," said the customer, "you just break the package in the middle across the edge of the box."

The clerk followed this instruction, finding that the macaroni broke readily and pretty evenly. He smiled with satisfaction as he saw the package reduced in bulk by half while its bulk was not very greatly increased, for a macaroni package isn't bulky anyway. Now it was possible to put all the things it included into a moderate sized and trim bundle.

"I never heard of that before," said the clerk.

"Oh, I've done that often," said the customer.

AS TO EFFECT OF PRAISE

It is Not Always Stimulating, Says This Man, Drawing on His Own Experiences.

The stinger sang well and the applause was insistent. Again he came forward, and this time he sang even better than before.

"It is always so," said one listener to his friend. "Applause stimulates us all. It's a pity that men can't be praised more than they are when they do good work. We are so often told about such things. We say that a man ought to do his duty anyway and not expect praise for it, when the fact is that if we praised him occasionally it would stimulate him, make him do more and better work."

"When I was a boy out in the 'wood-shed sawing wood," said the other man, "the old man would come along and look at what I'd saved and say, 'Sammy, you're doing splendidly. Keep it up, my boy.'"

"There was praise for you, but do you think that stimulated me? On the contrary, it made me want to smash the buck and beat the saw and break for the woods."

"Oh, well, of course," said the praise advocate. "There may be exceptions, but as a rule—" and so on and so on.

The Fatal "V"

Out of loyalty to his own sex the manager of the woman's suit department discharged the young woman stenographer and hired a man. The first batch of letters dictated to the man were written to about a hundred old customers, whom he invited to examine privately a lot of excellent garments before they were placed on sale. The day after the letters were mailed the women flocked into the store, but the fire that burned in their eyes was the fire of the anger rather than of the love of the hunter. One word which each woman had underlined in her letter explained their wrath. The garments, so the manager had heard to say, had been designed for women of stock figure, such as they possessed, but the male stenographer had drawn on the alphabet and had written it "stocky."

"No woman on earth would have been guilty of such a mistake," growled the manager.

The next week the girl stenographer had her job back.

Insane for Miring Him

This one was told of the late Senator Delahanty. It is of the trial of a man for murder, who was undoubtedly guilty, but was acquitted, greatly to the surprise of the presiding judge. The jury had been out two days—considering the case, without reaching a conclusion. Then the judge called the jury into court and asked what the difficulty was. The foreman said:

"Judge, there is only one thing that is troubling us. Was the prisoner's counsel appointed by the court, or retained by the prisoner himself?"

"The prisoner is a man of means," said the judge, "and he retained his own counsel."

Ten minutes later the jury sent out word that an agreement had been reached. They filed into court. The foreman rose and announced the verdict: "Acquitted, on the ground of insanity."

A Missourian's Curiosity Shop

J. M. White, residing near Pack, has in his possession a purse that is 104 years old, a chest which is 104 years old, a bedspread eight-hundred years old, and a pair of shoes 104 years old. He is ninety-eight years old; it is a massive piece of furniture. He has a razor, used and a walking cane sixty years old, the wood of the cane having been brought to the Central American. One of the lamps he uses he bought in 1867—Pineville Herald.

Long and Short

"I understand that little Mabel Jones is engaged to that extremely tall young simpleton, Buddy Brown."

"Yes, and have you heard her excuse?"

"Excuse?"

"Yes. She says she is only carrying out nature's most inextinguishable law."

"The law of love?"

"No, of course."

JAPANESE WIVES DIPLOMATS

Though Not Especially Beautiful, They Are Gentle and Loving and Know How to Handle Men.

A Japanese wife is more than a wife. She is an artist, says Adachi Kinkunosuke, in the Delicater. She is an artist in the most difficult of arts—and the most useful—the art of handling men. It is the consummation of her life. For it and in it, she lives.

The woman of Nippon is not notably attractive in either face or figure. She suffers a severe handicap in comparison with English and American women. Therefore she does the next best thing—she displays policy. I believe your word for it is tact.

Of the woman of Japan is one, just one, opinion among her judges—especially among her foreign critics: As a wife, she is all gentleness and lovable. This is quite remarkable, coming from men of the world around. Whatever their criticisms on other things, they are all praise for the Japanese woman as a wife. There are more reasons than one.

In the first place, she is a past mistress in the art of commanding men. In her case it is no longer an art—it is second nature with her. The basic, elemental qualification of a great commander of men, east and west, is that always has been that to know how to obey. Everybody knows that. Even Napoleon knew that. Greater than he was St. Helena after seeing Austria. The Japanese woman acts out this knowledge—what she knows so well and has known so long that she is no longer even conscious of it.

QUEERED REAL ESTATE DEAL

Man Had a Fit, and Prospective Buyer of a House Promptly Withdrew From the Transaction.

"There is more than one way to queer a deal in real estate," said the renting agent. "The other day I had just about rented one of my four-story houses when a man fell down in a fit at the bottom of the front steps. The prospective tenant saw him fall."

"Good heavens," he said, "what a narrow escape."

"I took that remark as an expression of sympathy for the sick man, but the renting agent let me know that it was he who had a narrow escape and not the other fellow."

"Nothing gets on my nerves," said he, "like a fit. Suppose I had signed the lease before I saw that."

"I protested that the neighbors had not the habit of stopping in front of that house and throwing fits."

"Maybe not," said he, "but I shall take no chances. I just moved from a house that was occupied formerly by a man who had a weakness for fits. Every time I thought of him I knew the house was marked and every time a professional needed a little assistance he just dropped down in front of that house and received a new start in life. After the funeral old philanthropist moved away they kept on coming. Nothing could stop them, so I moved. Now I nearly clutch a bargain for another house and the first thing I see is a fit."

"When a man has a prejudice like that arguments are of no avail. I am still looking for a tenant."

Salutary Example

Every legal expedient for delay having been exhausted, and their appeal for executive clemency having been made in vain to the president, five wealthy Alabama lumbermen have entered the federal prison at Atlanta to serve penal sentences for the crime of perjury. They will be extended to the families of these men, but the event itself cannot but be regarded as one of the most important and significant in the whole course of the recent awakening of the public conscience. It is a demonstration to the country that only by holding to personal accountability the men responsible for violation of the law can respect and obedience to law be enforced. The futility of law as a punishment in such cases has been shown, but it will only require a few such applications of the law as in these Alabama convictions to build a wholesome regard for law everywhere—Exchange.

Just "Folks"

People in the west are more "folksy" than we of the east. We apt to be an instance of this—this day or two after the inauguration ceremonies in the state capital of Iowa, at Des Moines, last week, a reception was given there which was participated in by the legislators and the wives, and the state officers and wives. The decorations for the two occasions were the same. In this way the Iowa wives were given some share in that acquaintance which comes to the legislators by virtue of their office, and these social occasions are the means of starting friendships that last—Springfield Republican.

The Youngest Great-Grandmother

North Carolina has the youngest great-grandmother in the country, and now comes to the front with the youngest great-grandmother.

She is Mrs. Adelle Ward of Mecklenburg county, and was forty-six years old in December.

Her daughter is Mrs. A. J. Lawing, thirty-two years old, the grandmother; her granddaughter, Mrs. W. A. Adams, fifteen years old, the mother of the great-granddaughter, Beulah Adams, nine months old—Raleigh correspondence, Baltimore Sun.
