Postmaster Pierce is weighing all the mail that is received and sent out this month. He is obliged to make a report to the department, itemizing each days work separately. This is a department provision that extends over the whole country and is made for the purpose of forming a basis for making contracts with railroads for carrying the mails as the price is determined by the weight.

Assistant Prosecutor Clinton McGee left Saturday evening for Springfield, Ill. where Sheriff Tripp had gone the same day with requisition papers for F. H. Patterson, wanted here for passing a worthless check. It is understood that Patterson will fight a return to this state and the services of Mr. McGee were needed by Sheriff Tripp at Springfield, and later at Chicago, where he goes today after Patterson.—Press Gazette.

A certain family in town were given a scare a day or two ago when it was thought a small child had swallowed a piece of a small chain that was being used as a plaything. After all the known antidotes had been administered the chain was found in bed where the child had been playing with it when she thought it had gone down her throat.
 By a vote of 48 to 1 the electors of Pontiac township voted to give the Detroit Edison company a franchise to run its high tension wires through the township. As is shown by the vote the residents were almost unanimous in the opinion that it would be a good thing to have the Edison company's lines run through the township.
 It will now be possible for the residents to have electricity to light their homes and barns and to operate their farm machinery. The Edison company has now extended its lines through a number of townships in Oakland county.

In the Wake of the Measles.
 The little son of Mrs. O. B. Palmer, Little Rock, Ark., had the measles. The result was a severe cough which grew worse and he could not sleep. She says: "One bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound completely cured him and he has never been bothered since." Croup, whooping cough, measles cough all yield to Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. The genuine is in the yellow package always. Refuse substitutes. Sold by T. H. McGee.

The Scientific Butler.
 Science in its more awful forms is confined to schoolboy howlers. One of the witty (Carpus) Alger's stories—cited in Mr. E. V. Lucas' delightful anthology of letters, entitled "The Social Post"—tells it.
 At a country house party a maid was dressing a guest's hair.
 "I hope, Barker," said the lady, "you are comfortable in your place?"
 Oh, yes, ma'am," the maid replied, with great warmth. "The society down stairs is so superior. The butler ends the conversation."
 "He is a refined man," she continued, with rising enthusiasm. "Indeed, quite scientific. He has been telling me all about evolution, and we quite understand it now."
 "He says," the maid concluded, earnestly, "that we are all descended from Darwin!"—Youth's Companion.

Question Pertinent.
 Doctor Scott, just present with Little of the well-known Greek Lexicon was at one time master of Ballou college, Oxford university, and master at all times of quiet sarcasm. A noble lord who had rooms in the building which adjoined the master's house and who, contrary to regulations, kept a dog in college, went to complain of the noise made by cats. After he had expatiated for some little time on this grievance, Doctor Scott said, with the gentle, slow draw which lent additional force to his sallies: "If that a cat, Lord Donoughmore, that I hear barking on your staircase every night!"

 There was an accident at a railway crossing at night, in which a farmer's cart was struck and demolished and the farmer injured. Counsel for the railway won the case for the defendant on account of the testimony of an old colored man, who was stationed at the crossing. When asked if he had swung his lantern as a warning, the old man swore positively: "I surely did." After the trial the lawyer called on the old negro, and complimented him upon his excellent testimony. He said: "Thankers, Massa Jawn, I got along all right; but I was awfully scared, 'cause I was afraid dat lawyer man was goun' ter ask me was my lantern lit. He all done give out befo' de accident."
