Harrison with 51 (49 percent), last at North with 60 votes (40 percent) and last at the Academy with 7 votes (32 percent). The students also approved the proposed public safety tax and an amendment to fill city council vacancles.

The public safety proposal would tax residents an additional i mill for a 10-year period to pay for additional police officers and freighters, and to pay for a new, centrally located fire station that would be attended all the time.

Alternative Academy students did not vote on either question. But students from North Farmington passed the public safety millage 77-57 (57 percent). Harrison students were less emphatic, voting 52-41 (56 percent) for the millage.

Students also voted on a charter amendment that would silow city council vacancies to be filled at the next August primary general election rather than at the odd year election.

North students voted 79-52 (60 year election.

North students voted 79-52 (60 percent) for the change and Harrison students voted 69-34 (63 percent) for the proposal.

"I think that I'm an intelligent, ntional adult and I think I thould be able to end my life in a gratle way without suffering," she said.

Good's cancer was diagnosed late in the summer after she stepped down as president of Hemlock. The resignation was unrelated to be rheelth, and she is still active as a board member, she said.

Shortly after the cancer was discovered, Good underwent surgery to remove part of her pancers and a tumor that was attached to it. Friends say she has recovered well from the surgery.

"She remains a very alert and very felsty person," said current Hemlock president Shaw Livermore, who in July replaced Good as the organization a beat.

Hemlock of Michigan started as a 16-member organization that met in the living room of Good's home. The group has since grown to more than 500 members, Livermore said.

Is a Michigan MBA that important?

Should we tell the world how important our MBA program is by changing the University logo? the we ten the worth now important our whost program is by changing the University I We probably couldn't get away with it, but many graduates (and even more potential employers) think that a Masters degree in Business Administration from the University of Michigan is among the strongest in the field. Good news for you.

University of Michigan is among the strongest in the Held. Good news for you.

The School of Management now offers two graduate degree programs at the Dearborn campus.

There is a dual degree program leading to both the Master of Business Administration and Master of Science in Engineering—Industrial and Systems Engineering. Then there is the MBA program which is designed as a crossover vehicle for those whose undergraduate degrees are in areas other than business administration.

Of course, with the Deatborn campus, things are even more convenient for many students.
Not easier, just more convenient. After all, this is the University of Michigan. Go Blue!

Two great choices for one great future!
