Local employees volunteer for United Way

This year, more than 400 volunteers from 46 companies, including employees from TRW in Farmington Hills, are participating in United Way Community Service's Days of Caring program. Days of Caring offers people the chance to sign up for hands-on community service projects through their work places. The volunteers are working on 28 projects they selected at 22 United Way agencies.

"This matching of company volunteers with community service projects at health and human service agencies that need help so desperately is ideal for everyone involved. Days of Caring is another example of how United Way serves the community by coordinating efficient use of its valuable resources — including volunteers."

Days of Caring participation increased substantially from last year when 225 employees from 30 companies volunteered their time. The main goals of Days of Caring are to allow Torch Drive contributors a chance to see the agencies that receive their donations, to show how their money helps people and to give them the opportunity to get involved in a hands-on project. United Way Community Service raises funds through the annual Torch Drive and distributes funds to health and human service agencies in Wayne, Oakland and Macomb counties.

United Way agencies help people with critical problems such as spousal abuse, child abuse and neglect, infant mortality, illiteracy, homelessness, juvenile delinquency and crime, care for the elderly and families under stress, among others.

Centenarian is a card

At 103, Irene Livermore cares for herself and is known to win a card game or two.

"She's very vivacious and laughs quite a bit," according to her daughter Carol Remington who lives next door to her at Farmington Place.

Although, Livermore has since given up painting with oil and water colors, she still plays cards and box games. And wins once in awhile, too.

"She's always had a nap, all her life, even when she was younger," Remington said. "She had a daughter, who lived with her, who had diabetes, so they cooked good meals and she always had me to take her out and do things for her. And maybe she has good genes."

Livermore was once quoted as saying: "If stress killed you, I'd be dead a long time ago." She was referring to the care she gave to family members when they were ill.

Livermore taught school one year before marrying Clarence Livermore. They were married 68 years before Clarence died in 1980. They had two children, three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.
