CONSCIOUSNESS

■ 'The deans have been in a very difficult situation. They've been thrown chore after chore with no support. They're expected to do paperwork and still think great thoughts and show academic leadership.'

Richard Thompson
OCC chancellor

The board acted within minutes after interviewing Keith and Thompson for nearly two hours. The interviews were public, as required in the Open Meetings Act. Three trustees, including 18-year veteran Sandra Ritter, told this newspaper they had no problem with public interviews, although boards at Oakland University and

Although OCC is 31 years old, Thompson is the first chief execu-

A former president of the Oakway (now Livonia) Symphony Society, Thompson predicted that "business and industry will be ever more demanding" for trained technical graduates, "but without losing sight of our core — we're an institution of higher education" in the liberal arts.

The board split was a familiar one. The five trustees, including board chair Douglas Wakefield, who fired Dr. Patay Calkins as chancellor voted to hire Thomp-
