A clipping from the Macon, Ga., Daily Times, left at this office, in speaking of the probable corn yield this season in that section mentions a field owned by C. S. Landlord Grace of the Owen House is bound to have a good well if it is a possible thing to get one on his premises. A steam well digging machine has been at work all the week drilling down towards China and while the pipe goes slow it is kept going. Much of the distance so far has been through hard pan and that was slow working.

As the Enterprise is now printed a day earlier than formerly we would like to have our correspondents send their news a day earlier than they have been in the habit of doing. On account of setting so much more type than in the past it is necessary to utilize all of the time between press days and the earlier news gets to the office the better paper we can publish.

Old Firearms in Historic House.
Much excitement prevailed the other morning when the historic old residence owned by C. E. Burd was destroyed by fire. Within the walls of the structure were hidden a small arsenal of firearms, rifles and pistols, all loaded, and when the heat of the building reached them a regular Fourth of July bombardment began.

The house was one of the old landmarks of the town, having been built before the Civil war. D. Offett, a southern soldier, had recently written to the owner of the property that the Confederates had stored guns and ammunition in the walls of the old structure during the war, but Mr. Burd was unable to get at the relics owing to the fact that the building had been surrounded and strong walls had been built around the old ones.

The much prized relics, consisting of ante bellum firearms of the crudest make, were hidden in the walls of the old structure in order to get them at the end of the struggle. Enterprise Cor. New Orleans Times Democrat.

IDEAS AS TO ADULTERATION
How Different Ages Change Opinions—Hops Once Considered as Harmful as Ale.

"Different ages have different ideas as to what constitutes adulteration," says a writer. "Most people now days regard the hop as a staple ingredient of beer, but in the seventeenth century the city of London petitioned parliament against its use in brewing, describing it as a 'wicked weed, which spoils the drink and endangers the lives of the people.' John Evelyn was a strong supporter of the anti-hop crusade. Hops, he declared, had 'transmuted our ale into beer and doubtless much altered our constitutions.' He allowed that their use had proved the favor of the liquor, but 're paid the pleasure' with 'tormenting diseases and short life.' He appealed to all loyal Englishmen to drink clear until this dangerous 'drogue' was banished from the breweries. It was the ancients who above all delighted to 'fill up the glasses with treacle and ink and anything else that is pleasant to drink.' In order to prevent acidity, heighten the flavor or increase the durability of inferior kinds of wine, they put into the casks such seasonings as sea water, turpentine, pitch, tar, resin, vegetable ashes, gypsum, lime, almonds, parched salt, galls, milk, cedar cones, gall nuts and blasting pine torches—not to mention poisonous salts of lead. They were fond of mixing perfumed oils with their wine before they drank it. Even in the Homeric age it was considered that wine was improved by having goat milk cheese grated over it and being sprinkled with sour."
