MOVIES

Sweet success: Steve Zahn, Jonathon Schaech, Tom Everett Scott, Liv Tyler and Ethan Embry react when they learn that their signature song is rising to the top of the churts in "That Thing You Do!"

Hanks mines rock's last innocent days

With "That Thing You Do!" first-time direc-tor Tom Hanks and son than indisting the manager.

The drummer is usually the goofy one, but the gogs here go mostly to Lenny, the guitar player, who himself resembles a young Jeff Daniels. This "Muppet Babies" approach to casting brings a certain comfort level to the movic, but also hints at how formulaic it all is.

The music, by Howard Shore, captures the period well. It's a credit to the title song that I barely got sick of hearing it even after a dozant times. As in the infinitely more ambitious "Grace of My Heart," the movie has our heroes interact with thirdly-disguised versions of real-life performers of the time.

Set in the months shortly after the JFK assassination, the movie has done its homework fairly well. It mines the usual pop culture icons and also tips a hat to Richard Lester's "A Hard Day's Night," especially in a montage in which the boys tumble across a yard-sized map of the United States.

Hanks, who also wrote the script, treats this story without a fine the difficult of the time, best seen in the moment where Lenny, awad by the thousands who have come to see them, asks Guy, "How did we mail to make the seript, treats this story without a fine the difficult of the time, best seen in the moment where Lenny, awad by the thousands who have come to see them, asks Guy, "How did we mail for the content of the
