

Internet lands ENVIRO-MICH

Michigan's citizen environmental and conservation movement now has a new gathering place on the Internet called ENVIRO-MICH.

The sponsors of this new free electronic forum expect one of the first priority uses of this communications tool will be to disseminate the decisions of local legislators regarding the environment. ENVIRO-MICH is sponsored by the Sierra Club-Mackinac Chapter as a service to Michigan's grassroots citizen movement.

"Any person interested in bringing our whole Michigan movement closer together with this 'electronic virtual community,'" said Horton. "As a movement, we're going to use this network to give Michigan environmental issues visibility in ways that we have never before attempted."

ENVIRO-MICH will be used to circulate the following types of information:

- alerts, political and electoral information and background information on breaking Michigan environmental issues and campaigns

- voting records for Michigan legislators and the Michigan Congressional Delegation; requests from national organizations for specific help with Michigan's Congressional delegation
- requests for help, information and other forms of sharing and mutual assistance; efforts to foster coalition building and outreach to Michigan citizens on Michigan environmental issues
- announcements of conferences and meetings by Michigan non-profit organizations and citizen groups
- educational and scientific information about Michigan environmental/conservation issues, problems, resources and controversies
- copies of news stories on environmental and conservation issues in Michigan and news releases from citizen organizations

The Sierra Club invites citizen activists, organizational members, MDNR/MDQP public servants, university faculty, labor and environmental justice advocates, members of the media, students and the general public to subscribe. To subscribe, send a message on the Internet to majordomo@sig.org.
