

Ballot box or toy box?

Little voters: First Impressions day care center in Farmington Hills had its own election last week. Here teacher Marie Darling helps 2-year-old Melanie Check place a card in the box. Results by the toddlers were pretty much the same as real voters, with President Clinton winning in four classrooms out of five.

School district makes plans to whoop it up for Education Week

Teachers and students from the Clarenceville School District, which includes a southwest portion of Farmington Hills, will leave the classroom and go into the community this week to celebrate American Education Week, Nov. 17-23.

Throughout the week students and staff will spotlight their accomplishments in "Points of Pride" posters displayed at the Livonia Mall.

"We want the community to see all the positives that are a part of educational delivery in Clarenceville schools," said Superintendent Tom Tattin. "We want to share our points of pride."

Each day from 9:30-10:30 a.m., students and teachers from Grandview Elementary will bring the classroom to the community by teaching lessons at the Livonia Mall.

Here's a rundown on their schedules:

Monday, Nov. 18: First grade students with teacher Kerri Woodman.

Tuesday, Nov. 19: First grade students with teacher Christine Jahns.

Wednesday, Nov. 20: Fifth grade students with teacher Sue Bielski. Class includes a DARE presentation by Livonia police officer Thomas Funke.

Thursday, Nov. 21: First grade students with teacher Linda Aldrich.

Friday, Nov. 22: Four grade students with teacher Wendy Kohl. Class includes an art lesson from teacher Mary Alice Allen.

Also on Friday, the Clarenceville High Choir will provide a musical program for shoppers from 1-2 p.m. at the Livonia Mall. The choir is under the direction of teacher Dawn Roberts.

To celebrate this big week for educators, students in Clarenceville High's television classes produced five cable programs featuring the four building principals as well as the community education program.

The shows featured:

Batesford Elementary principal Jesse Baker, who showcased his newly renovated school.

Grandview Elementary principal Ellen Davis, who featured the Peace People. The group is composed of students who use conflict resolution as a tool to maintain a positive learning environment.

Clarenceville Middle principal Carl Wagner, who highlighted the school's team teaching approach to instruction.

Clarenceville High principal David Simowski, who spotlighted some of the most popular classes offered in his school.

Community education spokeswoman Rose Govig, who presented students and instructors in the Tae Kwon Do classes. During the week throughout the community, several stores and businesses displayed art work done by students at all levels.

In their artwork, elementary students told why "School is Great."
