In Farmington Hills: Police arrested a Rochester Hills man, 49, for fleeing police at 8:37 p.m. Jan. 1. Police were behind the man's black 1996 Chevy Suburban at a light at Hubbard and Farmington Hills. The light turned green and the Chevy did not proceed for a few seconds. When it did, it swerved into opposite lanes, causing cars to swerve to avoid it. The Chevy turned north on Hubbard and Farmington Hills joined in pursuit by Farmington police. Police had lights and sirens on, but the Chevy ignored them, finally sidestepping a southbound vehicle, puncturing a front tire and forcing it to stop. The driver appeared to have a drinking problem and was a drunk.

In Farmington:
Farmington police arrested a Farmington Hills man, 21, for drug possession after finding heroin on the driver of a 1995 Ford Taurus. The man was at Farmington Auto Wash on Orchard Lake at 5 p.m. Dec. 31. Police were called there on a report of a man hitting himself in the head with a hammer. When Farmington police he noticed himself with the drug an hour prior. Police found six packets of heroin and syringes in his pocket. They also found syringes, a tin of needles, and a burner, marks, and a vitamin bottle containing a liquid later identified as urine. The man told police he paid $10 each for the packets of heroin and kept the bottles in his car in case he needed "a clean sample."
