Roberts shines in new comedy

JOHN MONAGHAN

Remember Julia Roberts? A couple of more career moves like she's been making and the question would have been films-gors scratching their heads. Now she's back in a romantic comedy that plays upon her best attributes: beauty, smarts, vulnerability, and surprising comic timing. Let's get something straight: I'm not exactly a Julia Roberts fan. I still wince at the enormous popularity of "Pretty Woman." Her sprit act in "Hook" irritated me. As the love interest of "Michael Collins," she brought that film to a grinding halt. "My Best Friend's Wedding" is a different story indeed. Some nine years ago her Julianne made a pact with best friend and former lover Michael, a scruffy sports writer (in there any other kind?) played by Dermot Mulroney. If neither is married by the time they both turn 28, they'll tie the knot. Just a few weeks before her birthday, she gets a desperate call. "I've met the perfect woman," Michael says. "We're getting married this weekend and we want you to be the maid of honor."

What's a girl to do? She packs her bags, grabs a plane for Chicago, and vows to break the marriage up in four days. Each elaborate plan against perky, young bride-to-be Kimmy (Cameron Diaz) backfires in perfect Wile E. Coyote fashion. When she sets the tone-deaf bride up at a karaoke bar, the locals applaud. When she tries to stir up disharmony about Kimmy leaving college to tag along with Michael on his job, the couple reunites in seconds, clearing the air of a potentially volatile subject.

As a last resort, Julianne employs gay friend and publisher George (British actor Rupert Everett) to pretend that they're madly in love. The idea of her with another man does get her old flame to notice, but how much you'll have to wait to see. And that's the real magic of "My Best Friend's Wedding." While you can predict the conclusion of most movies after 10 minutes, writer Ronald Bass' fresh approach to an old coveil comedy premise (remember "His Girl Friday?") keeps stringing us along right up until the end. It's not Shakespeare, but Roberts' performance is complex enough that you both hate and root for her at the same time.

If there's any justice at the box office, this should replace "Pretty Woman" as her signature role.

Everyone comes off well. Gon poster girl Cameron Diaz could have played your standard ditzy rich girl, but she too has something up her sleeve. You feel bad that she's manipulated this way, but, as Julianne points out, she only chose her rival as maid of honor to keep her at arm's length. Dermot Mulroney, usually relegated to friend roles, makes the most out of his rare chance at the center of attention.

The director here is P.J. Hogan, who helmed the Australian crossover hit "Muriel's Wedding." Both have an affinity for the diptiest of pop songs. While the previous film was filled with ABBA, this one employs Burt Bacharach cover tunes, including a hilariously over-the-top rendition of "I Say a Little Prayer For You" at the rehearsal dinner. It would take a second viewing to pick up all the clever little background touches that Hogan employs: the flaming restaurant grill as Julia concocts another devilish plan or the placement of characters in relation to each other. Forget all those dinosaurs. Batman and volcanic explosions. "My Best Friend's Wedding" will be the date movie of the summer.

John Monaghan welcomes your calls and comments. You can listen to him on Dave Dixon's Radio Show AM 1270, 8 p.m. to mid-night Saturdays. To leave John a voice mail message, dial (313)953-2047 on a touch tone phone, mailbox 1856.
