said Nichols. "I couldn't go out and play, there was no TV back then, and our radio didn't work consistently. So I had to read. Because of that, I became a reader, and really interested in education. I think I'm a teacher because of it."

"It also made me a fanatic about athletics."

While polio afflicted Nichols' left leg, his right leg grew stronger to compensate. In 1956, he set the Farmington High School high-jump record. It was broken soon after by the only Olympic gold medal winner to ever come out of the Farmington area.) Nichols was also voted Farmington High's Most Outstanding Athlete.

Pattern of success

His athletic success set a pattern for life. While his career as a teacher, professor and administrator flourished at several different schools, Nichols also became a hardcore runner, running up an estimated 32,000 miles over the years. However, he knew that jogging would take far too much time for his current fund-raiser.

So he decided to become a cyclist.

Nichols slowly worked his way up to a 75-mile-a-day average before giving himself a trial by fire — biking through the mountains of Tennessee and Georgia last summer.

"Before March 1996, I had never ridden a bike more than two miles from my house," said Nichols. "I know if I couldn't do the mountains, I wasn't going to make it to Florida."

Nichols has faced greater obstacles in life. Decades after conquering his ordeal with polio, he became a cancer survivor. Not long ago, a detached retina cost Nichols the use of his left eye, but he persevered, and began to look for a way to honor the organization that had taught him to survive early on in life.

Since the threat of polio was eradicated in the late 1950s, the March of Dimes had since turned its attention to birth defects, a subject Nichols frequently touches upon in his teaching. Once he came up with the idea of the Canada-to-Key West trip, he had no trouble niching the idea to the organization.

"Of course, we were not going to discourage him at all," said Bill Axtell, communications director for the March of Dimes in Southfield. "What we've done is worked with him, and tried to get the word out a bit about this effort."

The organization has arranged a few sponsors for Nichols' trip: the Florida Citrus Growers are donating beverages, and Evian has contributed bottled water.

Starting from the University of Windsor (where he was an adjunct professor), Nichols will parallel I-75 south through six states, and hopes to make it to Key West by July 25. The plan is to jog 150 miles, and bike the rest of the route, averaging 75 miles a day with every third day off for rest and publicity.

'Biking for Babies'

There are already plans for a CNN interview in Atlanta. Nichols' wife Alice, also a graduate of Farmington High, is following him in a van and hopes to convince Rush Limbaugh to mention Nichols on his syndicated radio program.

"If I can get a five-minute feature on CNN, that's 65 million viewers," said Nichols. "I'm doing everything I can to get publicity."

Along the way, he will be soliciting donations and distributing pledge cards, which people can use to sponsor him for a certain amount per mile.

Nichols' trip also coincides with the national convention of the National Education Association in Atlanta, to which he is a delegate and will pay a visit.

But Nichols isn't biking only two birds with one cross-country trip when he can do more. As secretary of Michigan Polio Network, he hopes to spread the word about Post-Polio Syndrome along his travel route.

Nichols himself suffers from the syndrome, symptoms of which include chronic pain and cold extremities. The syndrome can affect polio survivors even 40 years on in life.

"I have friends in my network, some who are completely paralyzed today," he said. "I want to identify polio survivors who are having physical problems four decades later, and get them to contact me to send them information about post-polio."

He may have no doubts about whether he can physically pull it off, but Nichols is keeping a special thought in mind to carry him through any rough spots.

"I call this my Biking for Babies project," he said. "That's what it really is. So that babies can live quality lives, even if they're born with a birth defect. That's my motivation. When I get tired on the back roads of Kentucky and Georgia, that's what will keep me going."

To make a contribution or pledge for Nichols' journey, call the March of Dimes at (810) 423-3200.

For information on post-polio syndrome, contact Nichols (in about a month) at (248) 340-6922.

Mercy teacher dies

Mathematics teacher Sister Connie Banks died from renal failure on June 23 at McAuley Retirement Center in Farmington Hills. She was 68.

Born April 21, 1929, she joined the Sisters of Mercy in 1958. She served as a mathematics instructor at Mt. Mercy in Grand Rapids, Mercy College in Detroit and Mercy High School in Farmington Hills over 35 years.

She is survived by her sister, Barbara Stadt of Grand Rapids, and her religious sisters in the Mercy Community.

"We at Mercy High School will remember her for so many things," said Sister Regina Doelken, principal of the school. "She loved teaching, especially the upper level classes, but she also loved computers. They challenged her, and she would not give up until she solved our computer problems and glitches both here at the high school and on the Mercy campus.

"She was one of the most faithful people I have ever met. She would ask what I needed and then say, 'I can do that.' And she did. No matter how much work was involved or how many complications arose, she did it!"

Her students will remember her for her brilliance, the challenging classes she offered, Sister Regina said, and for her ability to make even the most complex problem comprehensible.

Funeral services will be held 6:30 p.m. today, June 26, at Mercy Center Chapel.

Memorials may be made to the Tuition Assistance Program of Mercy High School, 29300 Eleven Mile Road, Farmington Hills 48336; or the McAuley Renovation Fund, 29000 Eleven Mile Road, Farmington Hills 48336.

$20,000 gone in produce heist

Burglars carried off two safes with a total of $20,000 in cash and two guns — including an Uzi 5mm semiautomatic — during a break-in of a Farmington Hills produce market after it closed Sunday night.

Thieves broke in sometime between 9:15 p.m. Sunday and 6:45 a.m. Monday at Farmer John's on Haggerty Road. It's believed the thieves parked in the east lot and then cut the vent slats on the south to get inside, police reports said.

The intruders managed to bypass an alarm on the west bay door and gained access to the office through a door window after unscrewing the frame.

Police believe they used four-wheel carts to haul out both safes.

Police have leads they're following up on, Commander Chuck Nabus said.
