the parade.

"I've lived in the Farmington community for many years. Being here for so long gives you a greater sense of community and pride. You want the community to be the best it can be. I think the Founders Festival and the parade are celebrations of that," said Bush, a Farmington city council member and longtime volunteer for the Chamber.

In addition to a parade of memories, the lineup will include antique cars, Miss Farmington and her court, police and fire brigades, drum and baton corps, community and civic leaders, and the always-popular Moslem Temple Shiner units featuring motorcycles, Arabian horses, clowns and much more.

Trophies and cash prizes will be awarded to junior and senior high school bands, precision drill teams, drum and band corps, and organizational and commercial float categories. The Farmington Area Arts Commission Award will go to the Farmington/Farmington Hills-based organization, association or individual with the best moving display. The Queen's trophy will be awarded to the parade's most original float, and the coveted President's Award will be presented to the float that best depicts the theme, "Remember When."
