

Live video is future of Internet

MIKE WENDLAND
courtroom in the Frank Murphy Hall of Justice.

I have seen the future of the Internet. And the future is live. Live video. Live audio. Music. Images. News.

Want to see an example? Check out WDIV Online (www.wdiv.com), Channel Four's Web site. Look on the far right hand column you'll find a hyperlink that takes you to live coverage of the Walter Budzyn retrial in the beating death of Malice Green, direct from the Frank Murphy Hall of Justice.

Right away, let me confess my bias. I work at WDIV and, in fact, founded the Web site. But aside from that, this really is a pioneering use of cyberspace. From Monday through Friday between 9 p.m. and 4 p.m., the station has put its special fiber optic feed from the courtroom directly on the Internet. You're now able to see and hear the action as Judge Thomas Jackson presides over the trial.

At times this feed may contain videotaped replays of specific parts of the testimony to be used in upcoming news broadcasts as sound "bites" for an edited news story to be shown on television. Or, if you tune in after 3 p.m. or around 11:30 a.m., you may watch as the on-air reporter prepares reports for an upcoming news broadcast. At other times, the feed includes interviews taped earlier or being done live.

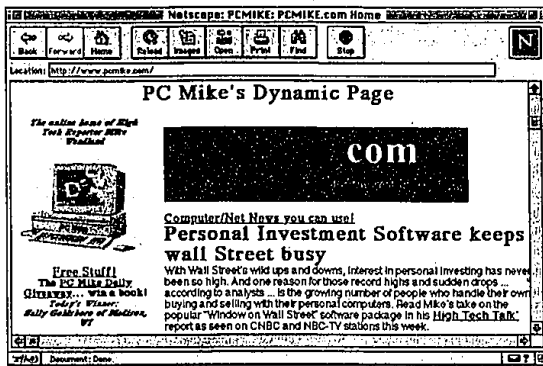

But, most times, it contains the courtroom activity. You see it and hear it as if you had a front row seat in the courtroom, which is exactly where the camera is located. Witnesses are questioned and cross-examined, objections made, evidence shown and diagrammed. You get it all, as it happens, instead of a one minute, thirty second report of someone else's version of what happened.

WDIV uses the most popular... and free... live video and audio software now offered for Internet consumers. Called RealVideo (www.real.com), it plays World Wide Web "programs" in a miniature box on your computer screen.

There are other Internet video applications out there. Some are as good or better than RealVideo. But, if for no other reason than they have been the best marketed, RealVideo is the clear favorite.

What does it look like? Well, as promising as it is, it is not of the quality you get from regular television.

Depending on the speed of your connection and congestion on the Internet, it may be amazingly smooth (through ISDN lines or T1 connections like those used by universities and major corporations) or somewhat hazy-jerky (as with 33.6 or slower modems).

But in all cases, the Net programming is understandable and well worth the look.

Here's some of the things you can listen and see... live.

• Film.com (www.film.com) offers movies, short films and interviews, plus reviews from top film critics.

• Timecast (www.timecast.com) an online guide, with links, to live concerts, press conferences, sports, business and entertainment happenings. The other day, for example, they were offering a live-recorded concert from the Royal Albert written by Paul McCartney.

• Bloomberg Business Video (www.bloomberg.com/videos) lets you watch the latest financial, world, technology, or business news clips.

• C-Span (www.c-span.org) offers live press conferences and speeches all day long, an invaluable special briefings from various government agencies.

• Fox News (<http://foxnews.com/video>) is one of the most video-friendly sites on the web. The other day, I watched in fascination as it carried a live broadcast of the solar eclipse in the Caribbean. You can still see it from the clips on their site.

• NASA (<http://quest.arc.nasa.gov>) ITC/InfoV offers live Net audio and video of major space launches and happenings. You can still look over clips from the Mars Pathfinder mission, as well as Senator John Glenn's press conference announcing his return visit to space.

• Trinity Broadcasting Network (<http://www.tbncast.com>) This is Christian TV, offering live video and audio and a video "Prayer Line."

• Bahrain TV (<http://www.gna.gov.bh/home.htm>) This is live TV from Bahrain. Lots of Arabic music and cultural events and local news. I watched it carefully during all the latest tension with Iraq because Bahrain was where all the American aircraft was secretly being gathered for what very nearly was an attack on Baghdad.

Where will this all end? It won't. Connections will get faster, the video smoother and larger and, within five years, we'll be watching full-length movies over the Net.

What happens to regular television? Cable and satellite television?

They'll all still be there. But anything you can get over the air or by cable will also be simulcast on the Net.

Mike Wendland covers the Internet for NBC-TV Newswatch stations across the country and can be seen locally on WDIV-TV4, Detroit. His "PC Talk" radio show airs Saturday and Sunday afternoons from 4-6 p.m. on TalkRadio 1270, WXRT and he is the author of "Surviving the Net: a web development course (248-853-1930) You can reach through his PC Mike Web site at <http://www.pcmike.com> month of January," noted Doug Rothwell, CEO and Director of the Michigan Job Commission which oversees the analysis of employment statistics.

"The slight increase in the jobless rate primarily reflects the continued strong rate at which workers are entering the state's job market."

Michigan's unemployment rate remains below the national rate of 4.7 percent.

This is the 34th straight month in which Michigan's unemployment rate has been below the national rate.

Annual Unemployment Rate
Since mid-1997, monthly unemployment rates have shown little movement.

For seven of the last eight months, the jobless rate has remained between 3.9 percent and 4.1 percent. Since January 1997, however, the rate reduction is a more substantial six-tenths of a percent.

Rothwell noted that Michigan's overall labor force has been on a strong growth pattern, increasing by 76,000 since August.

The state's annual average unemployment rate fell from 4.9 percent in 1996, to 4.2 percent in 1997, as employment jumped by 106,000, and unemployment fell by 29,000.

Industry Employment
The Jobs Commission's monthly survey of employers found that jobs increased in January in the government and manufacturing sectors, contrasted by a decline in construction and wholesale trade employment.

"Over the year, however, both these industries have seen growth, with construction being particularly strong. The service sector was the other top growth industry for the state in 1997," Rothwell said.

Hours & Earnings
Average weekly hours and earnings of manufacturing production workers also rose in January.

Hours worked in manufacturing were comparable with January 1997 levels, but in the auto industry, January's hours were below year-age levels.

held from the year's paychecks and any estimated payments made, but also any tax paid on the previous year's state tax return when filed. In some states, taxpayers can write off taxes beyond income and real estate.

Residents of several states, including California, New Jersey, New York and Rhode Island can deduct as state income tax the mandatory contribution they make to state disability funds.

Auto license fees normally are not deductible, but some states like Colorado base part of the charge on the value of the car.

That part of the fee as well as intangible taxes are deductible as a personal property tax.

quite popular. Dollars deposited in FSAs come off the top of your salary through payroll deductions, from your employer contributions or from both.

These contributions completely escape taxes, including Social Security and most state income taxes as long as the funds are used within a single year for medical care or dependent care not covered by employee benefits.

Annual limits for dependent care are $5,000.

Medical cost maximums are not set by law, but by employers. While FSAs provide an excellent tax reduction strategy, they do have one important drawback: the money set aside in this account during a given year must be used during that year or it will be forfeited.

Next week: More tax planning
