Chrysler training video finds scenic spot

Chrysler train

The tree-lined, history-drenched Farmington neighborhood where Janle and Rick Gundlach live apparently is a big hit with area film producers.

Farmington resident and film director Lad Guest brought a freelance crow down to the Gundlach's home last week to shoot footage for a Chrysler training video, to promote 1999 models, including the Breeze and Prowler.

And Avalon Films, which has studies not far from the Gundlach's home, has included snippets of the neighborhood - located north of Grand River; just east of Farmington Road - in several control of Grand River; just east of Farmington Road - in several control for Grand River; just east of Farmington Road - in several times.

"They actually do scout locations" for senie backdrops, said Janie Gundlach, who moved into the Fairfield-Gundlach House in 1978. "They're looking for certain things."

It didn't hurt the producer that his family and the Gundlachs are friends. Lad and Christiane Modrack Guest and Janie and Rick Gundlach cach have two sons attending for graduating from) Farmington High School. The Guesta live in another one of Farmington, Gundlach said. "It shows that our yards, our houses, the setting is acethetically pleasing. I'm happy to do it."

The neighborhood is pictures and seem-

it."
The neighborhood is picturesque, charming and seemingly a throw-back to another era. The modified, blue-gray Victorian home where the Gundlachs live was built in the 1860s.
"I guess it depends what they're looking for (in) a location," said Gundlach, about why Gundlach, about why her house was tar-geted for the Ross Roy Communications production. "But it's a unique old house and we have a lot of yard. I think they're looking at the set-ting. There's a good backdrop for this car commercial."

from the Farmington Training Center.

In fact, for last week's shoot, two tractor-trailer semis of lighting and film equipment were parked on the center's west lot, another large truck was parked in front of the Gundlach's home on Warner Street.

During the shoot, a red Breeze was parked in the driveway as the crew shot film from inside and outside of the car. Gundlach doesn't even think the car moved much during that time. About 5 p.m., Guest took the vehicle 'on the road' for some extra footage.

Several other vehicles were filmed around the Farmington area during a four-day period last week, Guest said.

"The historic district in Farmington offers a setting with character," said Guest, about why the neighborhood scens to be a hat place for film producers. "The Gundlach house, built in the ting. There's a backdrop for this car commercial."

That same back drop was used by Detroit Piston superstar Grant Hill for a NBA on TNT promotional spot. Hill and his dad were filmed shooting baskets in the Gundlach's quint, shady backyard, located not too far from the Farmington Training Center.

The city of Farmington cleared the video shoot and Gundlach said neighbors weren't upset shout the street being trans formed into a film set for a day.

They don't just invade your neighborhood without permission," Gundlach said.
