ROMANCE IS NOT YET DEAD

Little incident of the Streets of San Francisco Shows That It Still Lives.

At the corner of Twenty-second and Guerrero streets a young man waited for a car. Out of the corner of his eye he saw two other people waiting—a boy just out of his teens and a young girl. A suit case stood near them. The boy leaned against a plate glass window and looked impatiently up the street.

"I wish that car would hurry!" murmured the girl in a tone of voice low, but not so low that the nearby young man could hear.

"What if your father should come along?" the boy muttered. "Gee, if your father should come along before the car gets here!"

"Oh, he won't," the girl said, with a simulation of unconcern. "He never walks along here where the cars go. He doesn't like the noise."

"If your father should come along first?" muttered the boy. That was evidently the thing uppermost in his mind.

And the young man who stood near by smiled to himself to know that romance is not dead, but still throbs in the mission!

And he smiled again to think that of the two the girl seemed the cooler. —San Francisco Chronicle.

WAS HATER OF CONNECTICUT

Lewis Morris Carried to His Grave a Bitter Grudge Against That State.

A grudge against Connecticut seems to have been the ruling passion, strong in death, of Lewis Morris of Morrisania, who died in 1815. Part of the will of this Connecticut hater is printed in Case and Comment as follows:

"My desire is, that nothing be mentioned about me, not so much as a single line in a News Paper, to tell the World I am dead; It is my Desire that my son Gouverneur Morris may have the best Education that so it be had in England or America, but my Executors in their constitutions, that he never be sent for that purpose to the Colony of Connecticut, Least he should imbibe in his Youth that Low Great and Cunning, so incident to the People of that Country, which is so interwoven in their constitutions, that all their art cannot disguise it from the World. Tho' many of them under the sanction'd Gown of Religion have endeavour'd to impose themselves on the World for Honest Men."

Gathering Chewing Gum.

In Yucatan the gathering of the chicle chewing gum is an industry that employs the services of considerable bands of men known as "chicleeros." They go into the forest under experienced leaders, armed with heavy knives of special make and palls and ladders for the sap, and each one is provided with a strong rope, more than eighty feet long, to be used in climbing the lofty sapota trees, from which the gum is procured. The sap flows from gashes cut in the bark. A camp of chicleeros, where the sap is boiled, resembles in some respects an American maple sugar camp. After months of work the chicleeros return from the forests, laden with bricklike blocks of aromatic gum. The best gum is collected from the fruit of the sapota, mostly by the native women, and it is said that it is seldom exported, because it is too well liked at home.—Harper's Weekly.

Full Justice Not Done to Girl.

When Lawrence Barrett's daughter was married Stuart Robson, a beggar, a stock for $5,000 to the bridegroom. The comedian's daughter, Felicia Robson, who attended the wedding, conveyed the girl "Felicia" said, "When they were alone, he said to her, 'What did you give him the check?' 'Yes, father,' answered the daughter. 'What did he say?' asked Robson. 'He didn't say anything,' replied Felicia, 'but he shed tears.' 'How long did he cry?' 'Why, father, I didn't time him. I should say, however, that he wept fully a minute.' 'Fully a minute,' mused Robson. 'The boy's daughter, I cried an hour after I signed it!'

The Explanation.

A man who had been brought up in a country village, but who had moved to the city, was visiting the scenes of his childhood. He happened to meet a boy who was considered to be a little "off." "Get me a job," said the man to the boy, "I'll give you a good chance to find out from him about the people he used to know. Among others, he chanced to mention the name of an old schoolmate. 'Why?' said the boy, 'he has been married seven years and has 12 children!'" "Twelve children!" exclaimed the man. "How does that come?" "Oh," said the boy, "they had three to count, and two twits, and one a good many times."

A Thought.

I remember a nurse with who had to part with her husband for a time. She did not write a mournful poem; indeed, she was a silent person, and perhaps hardly said a word about it; but she quietly determined to dress in orange color with jaundice. A great many people in this world have but one form of rhetoric for their profoundest experiences, namely, to change their way and die. When a man can read, his thought has stakened its hold.—Holmes.

Good News for Pianoless Homes Grinnell Bros.' Great Sale of Summer Resort Pianos TO CONTINUE A FEW DAYS

At the time this sensational Clearance opened we expected that our floors would be cleared of the Rental Pianos and the sale brought to a close Saturday evening; but a conjuncture is necessary—due to the fact that the instruments coming in last week found us with our repair and finishing departments crowded to the limit. There was no chance to offer these Rental Pianos earlier, for we make it a fixed rule that every instrument shall have a thorough overhauling and, like all the others, these last instruments could not be placed on our floors until they had been carefully inspected, adjusted and tuned. However, they are now ready for your most critical investigation. They embrace the best makes, the handsomest designs, and among them are some of

The Greatest Bargains of the Sale

Most of these are Pianos which had been returned to the very end of the season. Of these, of course, a greater amount of rapt has been received than on those coming back earlier—and you get the benefit. This sale must be terminated soon! We are not stopping with the reduction of the rent alone; additional discounts are made, and the values presented are not only fully equal to those first offered, but in many instances are even greater.

The following list, in addition to the Rental Pianos, includes Sample Pianos, instruments taken in exchange, etc. All are in good condition, having been through our Repair Rooms, and, you will note, are offered in many cases at LESS THAN HALF ORIGINAL PRICE. You owe it to your interests to see this immense stock at the very earliest opportunity.

STAINED GLASS AND WOMEN

Letter Sometimes Desart Churches Because Colors From Windows Put Strains on Faces.

Churches whose treasures include costly stained glass windows find that their anxieties do not end with securing the money to pay for the window and the artist to execute the work. "Every bit as important as the complexion of the women in nearby pews," said a minister, "I have known churches to lose valuable parishioners because the window at the back or side cast an unbecoming light on a lady's face. That would have happened in my own church just a few days ago if we had not considered the lady's feelings and changed the design of the window, which was easier than changing the lady's pose or losing her support. The pay was a family inheritance, having been handed down by will from generation to generation; therefore it was out of the question to move. At the same time she had my sympathy in her revolt against that memorial window. No matter in what part of the pew she sat the glass cast a bright red spot right on the end of her nose and yellow streaks across her cheeks and forehead. Even a handsome woman would have been less attractive under that barbaric illumination; as my parishioner had not been particularly favored by nature those startling tints were positively deforming. Fortunately it was not too late to change the lower half of the window, and the lady now sits bathed in a becoming violet glow."

The First "Lady in Trade."

Perhaps the most notable instance on record of the feminine street trader is that of the "white widow," otherwise the duchess of York, the Frances Jennings of the De Grammont memoirs, who, at the time of the revolution in 1688, according to Horace Walpole, "being reduced to absolute want on her arrival in England and unable for some time to procure secret access to her family, hired one of the stalls under the Royal Exchange and maintained herself by the sale of small articles of haberdashery. She wore a white dress, wrapping her whole person and a white mask, which she never removed, and excited much interest and curiosity."—London Chronicle.

Knew His Business.

A negro, having won a dollar at a card game, decided to spend it on having his fortune told. The fortune teller led him into a gloomy room with dirty hangings and misty red lights. She took his palm, traced it with a dollar, spread out her cards, and then said: "You are very kind of music; you like chicken; you have won money at craps; and you have been in jail." The negro looked at her with bulging eyes and finally ejaculated: "Mah goodness, lady, why you jest read mah inmost thoughts!"

Powerful Cosmic Process.

"Let us understand, once for all, that the ethical progress of society depends, not on imitating the sham process, still less in running away from it, but in combating it. The cosmic process born with us and, to a large extent, necessary for our maintenance, is the outcome of millions of years of severe training, and it would be folly to imagine that a few centuries will suffice to subdue its masterfulness to purely ethical ends. Ethical nature may count upon having to reckon with a tenacious and powerful enemy as long as the world lasts."—Huxley.

More Pressing?

"Did you ever consider that old proverb of 'where all the pins go'?" "No, I am going to take up the solution of that problem as soon as I have learned where all the dollars go."—Houston Post.
