What's the word?: Eagle fourth-grader Marc Jacobs works on a crossword puzzle under the watchful eyes of his grandfather Charles Adler and aunt Jo Segal. They were celebrating Grandparent's and Special Person's Day at Eagle Elementary.

Program gives closer glimpse of different eras

Katie Holland beamed as she escorted both sets of grandparents down the hall at Eagle Elementary School on Friday, Oct. 22.

"It makes me feel special," said Katie, 9, accompanied by the Hollands and Shumakers. "I'm just taking them on a tour now. I need to show them what we do and where."

According to Katie's grandma Gert Holland of Taylor, being at the Farmington district school for "Grandparents and Special Person's Day" was a fun and educational way to compare different eras.

"I like this idea," Gert said. "It's to show the difference between school now and when we went to school."

Fourth-grade teachers Marlene Lindenberg, Lorotta Hines and Cheryl Jackson collaborated on the program, which featured project sharing, music, building tour and an interview/photo session.

For the latter, the youngsters interviewed their grandparents to collect information to be used in a book they will write and present as a holiday gift, Lindenberg said.

"It's just to have the kids get to know their grandparents, or someone special in their life, and share experiences of what we do each day in school," Lindenberg explained. "It's to bring families together."

Isn't that special: Eagle Elementary School student Chase Henderson's special friend was Anna Francisco. They met at church. The program featured project sharing, music, a building tour and an interview and photo session.
