Several people were outside when the incident took place, which may have prevented the assault from escalating, police said.
"Had she not resisted or had there not been people in the area, it's really hard to say if his intent was (to do) more. It certainly would appear that way," Assistant Chief Chuck Nebus said. "Especially since, as well as assaulting her, he made verbal domands." A man in a white van told police he chased the boy across 12 Mile where he ran into the Cordoba Apartment complex.
