

Turnout: Democrats turned out at Farmington Hills City Hall to cast their votes in the caucus March 11. The 11th Congressional District did its part to nominate Vice President Al Gore.

mail. Those who attended had the chance to sign up for a chance to become a state delegate, 47 of whom will be chosen May 20 by the State Central Committee in Muskegon.

They and 26 super-delegates - Michigan's 11 federal lawmakers and 15 Democratic National Committee members - will make up Michigan's delegation to the national convention, to be held Aug. 14-17 in Los Angeles.

Caucus site manager Deborah Goldberg, who serves on Gore's Michigan campaign team, had hoped to see a better turnout March 11.

"We were prepared to have 500 or more people here," she said, pointing out that the number of delegates is tied to participation. "That's why it's really important and it's too bad there's such a low turnout."

About a thousand absentee ballots were counted, including one from Ryan Gesund, who also attended the caucus. An as-yet-undeclared candidate for county commissioner, he managed to get some signatures on his petition to file candidacy.

But that's not the only reason he showed up.

"I wanted to see how the process worked," he said. "I've never been to a caucus."

Party: Former Farmington Hills Mayor Aldo Vagnozzi spoke on behalf of Vice President Al Gore in particular at Saturday's caucus. "Our task today is to unite behind Al Gore and elect a Democratic team that will build on the Clinton-Gore record," Vagnozzi said.
