What country comes closest to Silicon Valley in developing high-tech start-up companies? Israel.

The driving force behind that achievement? Graduates of the Technion-Israel Institute of Technology, a world-class university celebrating its 75th anniversary this year.

Technion graduates make up most of Israel's scientists and engineers. And of the entrepreneurs behind its many successful companies on the U.S. stock exchanges.

For six decades, the American Technion Society has been a partner in the Technion's achievements. Please join us in strengthening the Technion and ensuring Israel's success in the global economy.
