Jules Layolle's French Grand Opera Co. of New Orleans

Beginning Monday, April 1st, at the Garrick Theatre, Detroit, the Jules Layolle Grand Opera Company from the French Opera House, New Orleans, will begin a limited engagement of 8 performances, producing some of the best known masterpieces on the Lyric stage. This organization is unquestionably the pioneer operatic institution of America, having produced Grand Opera in the Southern Metropolis for nearly a century and the greatest operatic stars have appeared on its stage during their career. The difficult ordeal of pleasing a New Orleans audience who expect talent instead of reputation alone is a sure guarantee of the efficiency of this organization which has just terminated a four months opera season in the old Lyric Temple of the South, breaking all records of attendance and winning unlimited praise from the press and public. The company is under the personal direction of M. Jules Layolle, and the tour under the management of M. Paul Cazeneuve, and contains in all 150 people, including artists, chorus, corps de ballet and orchestra of 40 picked musicians under the able conducting of M. Paul Kochs, late of the Royal theatre of Brussels. The artists of this company have all appeared in the leading opera houses in Europe; the ballet is from Convent Garden, London. A special train of 12 cars is necessary for the movements of this enterprise.

The repertoire for the week at the Garrick will be as follows: Monday, Puccini's masterpiece, "La Boheme"; Tuesday, Donizetti's tuneful opera, "La Favorite"; Wednesday matinee, Gounod's favorite work, "Faust," complete with the grand ballet of the Valpurgis Night; Wednesday night Puccini's Japanese-American opera "Mme. Butterfly"; Thursday, "Manon," Massenet's Parisian success; Friday the sensation "Thais," by the same composer; Saturday matinee, Delibes oriental opera, "Lakme"; Saturday evening, Puccini's dramatic opera, "La Tosca."

The sale of seats for this engagement will open at the Garrick Theatre Thursday, March 28. Prices—entire orchestra, $2.00; balcony, first three rows, $2.00; next 3 rows, $1.50; balcony circle $1.00; family circle, 75c. Wednesday matinee prices, 50c to $1.50.

Four complete grand opera quartettes of singers will be heard in these operas, and this engagement should be the social and musical event of the Detroit theatrical season.

KNEW HIM AND LOVED HIM

Dr. Courtenay, mutilated veteran of the Confederate Army, as He Was in Tiptop.

Dr. Courtenay entered the Confederate army as a surgeon, and after the surrender found himself without home, family, or fortune. His right coat-sleeve dangled empty; the hand that had saved so many lives could not save itself. It had been amputated after Gettysburg, and the story goes that Lee himself—the name is always pronounced slowly and reverently in Tiptop—had said, "I wish I could give my hand to save your doctor." Another loss, equally grave, but less conspicuous, was that of his left lung. It was this trouble that had brought him to Tiptop's mild climate, for nearly 20 years he had lived there alone in his three-room cottage, riding out every day to his little farm, five miles from town, and reading and smoking far into the night. His library was the wonder of Tiptop. Books in five languages lined the walls of his house—all in the cheapest binding, for the doctor was poor; but, as he used to say, it was the meat in the nut he cared for, not the shell outside. He never practiced medicine, except occasionally among persons too poor to pay for medical advice, or, more frequently, in serious cases when called in consultation. It was known that he had never taken a fee in Tiptop. Every one believed in justice in his skill. It was a common thing to hear him say, after a death, "Nothing could have saved him; Dr. Courtenay said so."—Lillian Kirk Hammond in the Atlantic.

THREE BUILDERS OF NATIONS

Cavour, William the Silent and George Washington Never Yielded to Despotism Ideals.

As a nation-maker Cavour stands with William the Silent and George Washington. Each of these men fought through the agony of a war of liberation, yet never yielded for a moment to the militarist or despotic ideals so liable to be bred in times of crisis; each loved free institutions with his whole heart; each could have said as truly as William the Silent, "I was always on the side of the people"; yet each avoided the special faults of the demagogue as completely as Wellington or Peel; each planted justice and mercy amid the chaos of wrath and revolution; each kept an heroic equanimity of temper toward all their supporters, even toward the foolish and the false who bade fair to ruin their work; finally, each died leaving as his handiwork a nation whose every merit is symbolized in the life of the man who made it, whose every defect is due to the tradition which he started being too lofty for imitation. If Americans can boast that America is more true to the traditions of Washington than Italy is true to the traditions of Cavour, they may be sure that their country is reaping the benefit in due proportion. Measures and policies and constitutions will hang with changing time, but the spirit that inspires a just policy is the same in the eighteenth, the nineteenth, and the twentieth centuries.—George Macaulay Trevelyan, in the Atlantic.

Special House for "High Brow" Ages

The "high brow" ages in the New York Zoological park are to have a house to themselves in the near future. The board of estimate and appropriation will soon be asked for the expenses for such a structure. To present the erudite chimpanzees and orangutangs are in the house of the most intelligent sisters and brothers.

Yellow Jackets Held Steplike

A contractor and three carpenters were painfully stung when they climbed to the top of the First Baptist church, 11 New Castle, Del., recently, to make a repair to the roof. Thousands of yellow jackets had made their home in the belfry, and they resented the intrusion and drove the men to the ground. One of the men made his way to the belfry and with a paper covered all exits by which the insects could escape. Then he placed four sulphur candles under the cupola and lighted them. After the candles had burned out and the dead insects were found to fill a peach basket to overflowing, and the carpenters then resumed work on the church roof.

The Old-Time Barber

Old-time barbers had to display more variety than their successors. A work published in 1892 describes a barber's greeting to a customer. "Sir, will you have your hair cut after the Italian manner, short and round and then trowel with the curling iron to make it look like a half moon in the mist, or curled like the two ends of an old perwig, or will you be Frenchified with a levellock down to your shoulders? The English cut is basic and gentlemanly, and I would like to see you in it. Now, sir, my scissors are red, to execute your work as they will."

FRENCH TRAVELING SHOW.
The traveling showman is commoner in France than in England, particularly in country places. He is almost vanished as an individual from English country fairs; he exists only as the proprietor of galloping horses or boxing saloons or fat ladies. But at the smaller country fairs in France you may still find the juggler, with his tinsel and lights, and the strong man, and the sometimes quite charming dancer. The most ordinary French crowd has a curiosity about art of any kind unknown in England.—London Chronicle.

is not always made from good flour. Sometimes, quite often, in fact, the fault is with the cook. But while poor bread is often made of good flour, good bread is never made of poor flour.
