

Jewish film festival to air Hank Greenberg documentary

The documentary film, The Life and Times of Hank Greenberg, will be shown during the Jewish Community Center's 3rd annual Lenore Marwil Jewish Film Festival.

The festival will take place Sunday, April 29, through Sunday, May 6, at the United Artists Theatres in Commerce Township. The Greenberg film will be shown at 5 p.m. April 29.

Dubbed "Baseball Moses," the first Jewish baseball superstar, Greenberg excelled at a time when anti-Semitism was rife in the U.S. and abroad. He led his team to American League pennants, to World Series titles, and more than once was named Most Valuable Player.

Directed by Detroit native Aviva Kempner, the documentary recalls the Detroit Tiger's baseball accomplishments as well as his mission to defy stereotype and ward off the hate mongers on and off the field.

The film includes archival footage and interviews with Greenberg's contemporaries.

The film festival will feature 29 films in 19 screenings. About 20 producers, directors and other speakers will discuss their work or talk about the content of films.

New this year will be a 9:45 p.m. Saturday showing of films with Michigan connections. There will be animation, shorts, documentaries and features on many aspects of Jewish life. Focus On Film series will provide moviegoers with critical reviews of each day's fare. Series tickets are $79; $69 for seniors. Individual tickets are $7 general admission; $6 for seniors.

Call the box office at 248-788-2900.

Council honors religious broadcasting

The Metropolitan Christian Council of Detroit/Windsor will host the 3rd annual Herald Awards banquet at the Costick Center on Wednesday, April 18, at 6 p.m.

The Herald Award is the council's way of honoring those in print and broadcast media who do stories of a religious or spiritual nature. This year's winners were aired or printed in 2000.

The host for this year's program will be local journalist Teresa Tomco.

In addition to the Herald recipients, there are two other media awards, one is the lifetime achievement award that is given in honor of the Emmy Award winning WXYZ-TV director, Lyle Roes.

Roes was the longtime creative genius behind Daedal Doors and Soundings, two of the channel 7 programs produced by the council. This year's award will honor Bob Scott, channel 66 vice president of programs and education. The second award is that of broadcast television community service which will be presented to Chuck Stokes, channel 7's editorial director.

Dinner tickets are $25, with tickets available through the council office. Call 313-962-0340 for information.
