The soul-stirring experience of singing Robert Ray's Gospel Mass moves the members of the Detroit Concert Choir, literally. Alan Cooper's sung it a number of times with the choir. He can't wait for audiences to hear and feel the music at concerts Saturday, May 4, at St. Hugo of the Hills in Bloomfield Hills and Sunday, May 5, at First English Lutheran Church, Grosse Pointe Woods.

"It's uplifting, inspirational, a piece the choir enjoys singing," said the 42-year-old Waterford resident who works in Canton. "I love singing. It's extremely relaxing. It stimulates the artist side of me. I'm an engineer so singing brings me in contact with the arts."

Cooper's been singing since the age of four and knows church music, but this piece is a little different from the style of music with which he grew up. That's why he sings with the Detroit Concert Choir under the direction of Gordon Nelson. It offers members the opportunity to taste different styles of music.

"The standard of music is excellent," said Cooper who sang with a male choir in Manchester before being transferred to Detroit from the U.K. in 1996. "It's a competition choir with a variety of repertoire second to none. We sing from the heart and soul."

Susan Bielman agrees with Cooper that music, especially the Gospel Mass, arouses feelings deep inside. She has sung Ray's composition a few times during her 14-years with 80-voice Detroit Concert Choir. It is one of the tracks on the choir's fourth CD, Hallelujah! Amen!

"I love it," said Bielman, a Troy resident who went to Wales in 1996 to compete with the chorus and took the top award, Choir of the World. The Detroit Concert Choir has won 14 awards in European competitions in the last 10 years.

"I was raised Catholic. The mass is all prayer but a gospel-type music. The solos stand out and touch the heart."

Vickie Kimler thinks the reason the music moves audience and singers alike is because of a jazz technique employed by Ray. Tenor soloist James Moore Jr. takes the spotlight to carry it off.

"He uses scat singing. They go up and down the scale," said Kimler of Farmington Hills. "I love it. It makes you want to dance in your seat while you're singing no matter what your faith."

While Kimler enjoys performing the Gospel Mass, she's just as fond of the rest of the Heart of America program, including Amazing Grace.

"I like all of the pieces," said Kimler. "It's music that uses rock, jazz and classical. I call it modern rock gospel blues. We'll sing selections that won the choir's first place in an international competition in Austria last summer along with folk songs and spirituals."

Heart of America: The Detroit Concert Choir performs a program of American folk, gospel and spirituals May 4-5 in Birmingham and Grosse Pointe Woods.
