PEACE OF MIND

Just as our physical environments can become cluttered, so too can our minds. We clutter our minds with grocery lists, "to do" lists, telephone numbers, birthdays, passwords, etc. Keeping all of these things in mind can be a formidable task and a source of constant anxiety, especially when the pace of life and work require that more things be added to our mental inventory than are being removed. Fortunately, there are many effective ways to clean up our mental clutter, and thereby increase our peace of mind. One simple way is to make a list of all the things hanging over our heads, then decide which of these things deserve our immediate attention, which can be done later and which should be "thrown overboard." Although we shouldn't feel bad about throwing meaningless things overboard, one item we should always keep on our list is to "pray daily." Prayer has a way of lessening our anxiety and helps us to keep things in the proper perspective. Whenever we pray, we are building a loving relationship with God and we are recognizing Him as our source of strength. Life can be simpler and more carefree, but we have to extend an effort to make it so.
