CAMP

FROM PAGE C1

In most of the drills, coaches awarded points for how well the kids executed the play. The winners of the drill would get rewards like candy bars.

"At a young age you don't get the proper technique," Riker said. "You try to do things competitively. You try to make it a game. You just try to incorporate all the good things and make it fun. It's good working with the young kids."

Kalczynski is from Farmington and attended

Brother Rice. He has been an assistant coach at the University of Illinois and U-M. He has also coached summer collegiate ball in New England. He recently accepted an assistant coach's position at Central Michigan University.

Is there Life After Prostate Cancer?

The answer is, absolutely ... but successful treatment of the cancer sometimes leads to distressing side effects like erectile dysfunction (impotence) and incontinence.

You and your partner are invited to attend a free seminar to learn about the latest treatments for both ED and incontinence—treatments that can help you regain control and live life to the fullest.

Special guest speakers, Richard and Desiree Howe, will speak openly and honestly about Richard's recovery from prostate cancer and what each of them experienced. Dr. C.B. Dhabuwala, one of the leading urologists in our area, will be on hand to present information on innovative medical treatments and answer questions.

Richard Howe, PhD, former President and
COO of Pennzoil

Desiree Howe,
Richard's wife,
helps educate partners about what they might expect when their partner copes with life after prostate cancer. Her book, "His Prostate and Me," shares her insights with frankness, humor, and charm.

C.B. Dhabuwala, MD, is board certified in urology and has been affiliated with Wayne State University School of Medicine and the Detroit Medical Center since 1981. He has devoted much of his practice to the diagnosis and treatment of erectile dysfunction and incontinence.
