Budding musicians wanted for piano classes at Schoolcraft

Have you ever wanted to play piano or would like your child to learn? Schoolcraft College's Music Department offers a variety of programs tailored to specific ages and abilities. Students should apply now to register for the fall term or schedule an interview or audition by calling (734) 462-4403. The Early Childhood Music/Pre-Piano Division proves it's never too soon to get started. Children from infants to age 6 will explore music using simple percussion instruments, singing and movement. The program prepares youth for further music study. The 45-minute classes run once a week for 12 weeks. The Piano Academy, Elementary Division offers students in first to fourth grade the opportunity to study privately and with a group each week. They develop sight-reading and rhythmic skills, study keyboard theory, improvisation, and composition. An interview is necessary before enrolling. The Piano Academy, Intermediate Division is for middle and high school students and combines 45-minute private lessons three or four weeks a month and master classes/group lessons with music professor Donald Mondock. Students have frequent recital opportunities. An audition is necessary for admission. Adults are welcome in Schoolcraft's traditional credit class piano program. No audition is required to study. Adults interested in earning a piano teacher's certificate can register for the two-year program and practice teaching opportunity. In addition, the music department presents a series of free noon concerts throughout the year. For more information, call the above number.
