an offer. While Scieluna's menu at the Garden Cafe isn't exactly the same, she said, "We'll keep you cozy and we've got tea in case you want it."

She has updated the building, redecorating and painting inside. A sun room at the back of the house, for instance, features a colorful garden motif mural.

"We have a lot of dreams for the future," Scieluna said. In addition to offering lunch, dinner and brunch service during the week and on weekends, the Garden Cafe is equipped to host special events.

"Someone said they wanted to get married here," Scieluna said. "I told them I can do everything but your vows."

On hand for the opening event, Farmington Mayor Jim Mitchell quickly interjected he can take care of that part, as Farmington's mayor is authorized to perform wedding ceremonies within city limits.

Scieluna expressed appreciation for the support and encouragement she's received from her family and the community. She described neighbor Marion Tobkin of Three Oaks Furniture as her "guardian angel" and said his advice about what to do - and what not to do - has proven invaluable.

Mitchell said while opening a business is a big deal for the owner, "It's equally a big deal for us, because you're going to continue to host a restaurant facility. We need that in downtown."

The Garden Cafe serves lunch Tuesday through Saturday, 11 a.m.-3 p.m.; dinners Thursday through Saturday, 6 p.m.-9 p.m. and Sunday brunch from 10 a.m.-2 p.m.

SPOTLIGHT ON:
Orthodontics

by Josephine Finazzo, D.A.D.
GETTING AN EARLY START

Certain orthodontic problems lend themselves to treatment at a young age. One of these is a crossbite, a condition that features an upper jaw that is narrower than the lower, causing side teeth to line up incorrectly. It is often best to correct a skeletal deformity such as this as early as possible. Without treatment, the jaw's abnormal position may cause teeth to grow improperly, which may create further problems in the years ahead. Moreover, younger bones are more pliable and can often be adjusted more easily. Using a fixed appliance rather than a slower-acting removable retainer to push the sides of the upper jaw apart, the orthodontist can often correct a 7-year-old's crossbite within four months. Taking care of problems like this early on can save you money and your child treatment time. We are happy to assist you in taking care of your family's teeth. To make an appointment with us, call THE ORTHODONTIC GROUP, 442-8885. Located at 19850 Middlebelt, we would be glad to explain orthodontic equipment such as the Twin Block, the Mara bite advanced, the palatal expander, and the retainer. Look for our next article in two weeks.

CORTISONE - THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN BY MOUTH AND BY INJECTION

In treating joint and tendon pain, cortisone is a powerful tool. The ability of cortisone to stop inflammation is comparable to what water does to fire. However, like anything mighty, the ability to do great good includes the capacity to do great harm. The use of high dose cortisone taken by mouth, in the equivalence of prednisone, 10 mg a day or higher, and given over weeks to months, creates the potential for unwanted side effects. This includes rounding of the face, deposits of fat around the neck and shoulders, loss of bone calcium, susceptibility to ulcers, risk of cataracts, increased blood pressure, loss of the sun, and loss of the adrenal glands ability to regulate your body's need for cortisone.

Cortisone by injection does not carry these hazards. First, you take this dose of steroid intermittently. Usually weeks or months separate one injection from the next, rather than getting a dose everyday. Second, cortisone by injection is formulated to stay in the joint or muscle site where it is injected. It does not circulate through the whole body as oral cortisone does and cannot cause changes in fat cells, stomach lining, or the eyes that underlies the toxicity of oral cortisone.

Excessive cortisone injections can occur, but the margin of safety is great; even monthly injections have never proved to be toxic. If you have questions about "getting too much cortisone," bring those concerns to the attention of your doctor. Be assured he will be able to explain the need and the safety of this use.
