EDITORS OF "HOME TOWN" PAPERS TO MEET AT LANSING

Annual Conference To Improve Weekly Press Scheduled For January 24, 25, 26

Publishers of Michigan's "home town" or "community" newspapers wil gather at East Lansing on January 24, 25, and 26 this year for the annual conference of the Michigan Press Association.

Discussion of editorial and business problems aimed at building a stronger, weekly press for service to thousands of readers, will feature the business sessions of the meeting. Leading figures in the nation's editorial, business and political life are scheduled to speak at special gatherings of the conference.

More than a half century old, the Michigan Press Association includes in its membership over 200 publishers of weekly newspapers. Delegates from every corner of the State will "sit in" on the coming meeting.

James Schermerhorn, of Detroit, known as "Jim" to Michigan newspaperdom, will be a featured speaker at the association's annual banquet on Thursday evening, January 24. A former publisher of a country weekly and president of the Michigan Press Association, Schermerhorn has earned a reputation in late years as one of America's leading after dinner speakers.

IN MEMORIAM.

In treasured memory of my dear husband, John Turner, who died January 7, 1927. My husband John is gone from here. I always loved him so. For all of us he did his best. And then he had to go. I miss his voice, his loving care. His smile no more I see: As long as life and memory lasts. Remembered he will be.—Sadly missed by his wife, Dora and sons Harold and Laverne and loving mother, sister and brothers.
