merciy a tecunicar way or patting its meither of them was actually any where near it. Malrow MacAudrew sighted.

"The two warst dufers of the club," the solifonjazed. "An there they go tearin' up the turf—by word! What an awfu 'swing!" He closed his eyes and grouned as he whether. "Avved," he remarked philosophically as that pair disappeared in the depths of a bunker, their usual haunt withe making the round, "The himkin' its not so bad. They're main weed suited to each their. Now I suppose they'll not be cought out of you jut till they're driven forth. Engaged couples ha' an manner of "right" on the curse and should keep off.

Andrew was right. The pair stayed in the jut ju long time. Said Mariou "Neither, can I, sheet heave he for thankful that that ball lift you!" "Neither, can I, sheet heave he had do meet you for weeks and the half looked like a heavy-sent chance, so I pretennied to be compiled; knocked out."

Sharpness of Shark's Teeth Accounted For

The proverbil sharpness of a ser-pent's tooth is declared to be wrong; it should have been a shark's tooth. Not only is the shark's asserted to be the sharpest—tooth in the world, it appears also to be both the sharp-est and the hardest of all animal sub-stances.

its uses in newer industries. In fact, for veriatin jurposes its value still remellas superior to all modern substitutes.

Self-Created Slavery

Man has made so many and such marvelous machines, thinks al modern philosopher writing in the American Magazine, that he has become enslaved to them in thought as well as in action.
