Gardener Lucky When

Father Toad "Locates"

If a family of toads take up their residence in the garden it is time to feel that good luck has smilingly descended upon the place.

The toad is an asset. As a worker he does not believe in short hours, but is constantly on hand throughout the 24-hour day. He asks for nothing, only that he be left alone. And his presence means better vegetables and better flowers and richer grass.

One joy in life is his—but of eating. He is not so continuously it might be regarded as almost a religion. The biggest eater among the field hands is a toad compared to him. In 25 hours the toad will consume insect food of a volume four-fold the capacity of his stomach.

Variety is his long suit, and the majority of the things the toad loves are in their state most of every man who puts seed into the ground. With few exceptions, everything in the shape of an insect goes to a stomach oblivion. With the toad if it got into the mouth it is edible.

Life on Earth Before the Cambrian Period

A picture of life as it existed on the earth 600,000,000 years ago has been drawn by Prof. Sir Edgeworth David, Australian scientist.

He has found fossils of animal life in Australia dating back to before the Cambrian period in geology.

Sir Edgeworth, almost by accident, discovered in the rocks of Mount Lofy and in the Flinders ranges of South Australia beautifully colored fossils which, from the strata in which they were found, show that a marine fauna in the early days of the earth's formation had covered a million square miles of what is now Australia.

The fossil life thus represented must have existed in the Cambrian period.

"I could kick myself that I should have overlooked this obvious discovery for so long," said the professor in announcing it.—London Times.
