MAKES POSSIBLE OUR HIGH LIVING STANDARD

Charles J. Mullen, general manager of the Tampa (Fla.) Times, says:

Here in America we live better than any other people in the world, and much of the credit for this high standard of living goes to advertising.

Advertising makes mass production possible, and mass production brings efficiency and lowers costs. Thus, through the speeding up of industry under the stimulation of advertising, a day's labor in America produces more goods than anywhere else in the world, and a day's wages buys more.

Because it does create new desires, improve old habits, increase efficiency in industry and distribution, advertising is economically sound and will continue to grow in influence. And as it does, develop greater power of appeal, it will further raise our standard of living by making necessities and luxuries cheaper as measured in a day's labor.

Another thought is that advertising is making possible better and more attractive newspapers and magazines, and in turn these are making us a well read and well informed people. Almost everyone reads now. Old prejudices are breaking down and we are attaining a new application of the art of living.
