Cultivating a Fad

"What did you give Sue for her birthday?" inquired a visiting cousin. "Oh, a teapot, of course. She has a fad for collecting, you know. She has the most charming ones—are things that all her friends send her, and she keeps them in a special cupboard built into a window where the light shines on them and through some of them. I gave her an exquisite little teapot that I had Charlie bring me from China on his trip last year. She is so easy to get gifts for, as she has three collections to add to. She never gets the nondescript handkerchiefs, sachets, and gift-shop doodads that the rest of us do."

The woman with a fad or two is not only a delight to herself, since she becomes absorbed and interested in some one activity, but she is a boon to her friends as well. I know a matron whose garden is her chief joy in life. She has a collection of garden books to which her friends are always adding, and which includes some of the magnificently illustrated de luxe volumes that most of us merely look through in the shops. To see one of these books is to think of her and send it to her, if possible.

Cultivating a favorite color gives one individuality and helps one's friends to choose acceptable gifts. A lavender scheme of summer-house decoration and personal clothing, brings one woman of my acquaintance the loveliest of lingerie, negligees, candlesticks, semi-precious stones, and so on—all in the lavender tones. A fair for peasant things—embroidered bedspreads, Czechoslovakian chests or china, odd-painted wooden pitchers or bowls, draws these things to one like a magnet.

A young girl I know is immensely fond of apples, and says so. What a distinctive birthday she has! A box of apples from the Far West; a decorative bowl of apples for her room at school; an occasional jar of fresh-made apple sauce from a doting aunt; a set of table linen, amusingly decorated with apples—apple jelly, apple butter—a card with "Appley Year" on it! One is never at a loss to know what to give her.

St. Marks in-the-Bouwerie

ST. MARKS in-the-Bouwerie is, undoubtedly, one of the outstanding landmarks of early New York city. It also is one of the few old-time churches remaining in that city which still occupies the site originally selected and dedicated for worship, while the site is said to be the oldest now so occupied. The church is unique. So is its history.

Petros Stuyvesant, the last of the seven Dutch governors, was a picturesque character in early New York history. He had a bouwerie—a suburban home with a garden. Bouwerie village was laid out on his ground. In it he built a chapel. He died in 1672. His wife gave it to the Dutch church. Subsequently Trinity church became interested. Now it appears to be a Dutch church with an Episcopal service—a decidedly unusual religious combination.

The present structure quaintly reminds one of ancient days. The cornerstone was put down in 1705. Stuyvesant's tomb forms one of the foundation stones. Its venerable walls are overhung with ivy and aged trees spread their branches over the graves in the side yards. An old-fashioned scraper for removing mud from the boots of worshippers attracts attention as one enters. The interior is restful to an extreme, rich in colorful windows and memorial tablets.

The co-operation of the clergy with enlightened physicians has brought about a neighboring soul-and-body clinic where the ill of many sorts are treated through a sympathetic blending of science and religion.
