"BE A SCENARIO WRITER" BUT PAY ME ANYHOW

Extravagant advertisements in doubtful periodicals are urging ambitious amateurs to "write for the movies."

Your "expert teacher" exacts from you a handsome fee for "correcting and placing" your manuscript or scenario.

The large moving picture interests employ only highly-trained writers of great skill, but inform Better Business Bureaus of thousands who pay tribute to the fake scenario writing school or teacher.

For every 25,000 amateur scenario submitted, only one is accepted.

"Heads I win, tails your lose," correctly describes the countless thousands of dollars which pour into the coffers of the disreputable scenario "services."

You have only one chance in 25,000. Keep your dollars working for you, instead of throwing them away as tribute to some movie scenario sharpener. Before You Invest—Investigate!—Better Business Bureau.

RIGHT SIZED BULB

FOR THE GARAGE

Adequate lighting for a one or two-car garage includes provision for exterior as well as interior illumination. Three sources of light are desirable—a 60-watt ceiling fixture for general lighting, a 40-watt portable lamp for use locally, and a reflector for alley or driveway lighting. Used with the reflector, a 100-watt lamp bulb illuminates a considerable area around the garage.
