ABOUT PROUD PORRIDGE

"I WISH," said the porridge as it waited in the double boiler on the stove, to be put into porridge dishes. "That I were ice cream."

"Then," said the coffee slumbering at one side of the stove, "you wouldn't be here of a morning."

"Maybe not," said the porridge, "but I'd be better liked."

"You see, I'm substantial and sensible and healthy and wholesome."

"Now, all those things are very excellent things to be, but they don't exactly excite anyone to a high pitch of delight and happiness."

"I am put on the night before, as a general thing, you know, and I cook."

"It's Silly to Worry About Something One Can't Help."

slowly while I hear what is going on. "If there is going to be ice cream, there is a great excitement."

"Oh, we're going to have ice cream," everyone shout as soon as the news gets about.

"But they never net that way about me. I'm respected but not loved."

"Sometimes they speak of me as Old Oatmeal, or something equally harsh."

"Oh, I'd be so happy if once I could hear some one shout with delight at seeing me, and jump up and down, and say:

"Oh, goody, goody, goody, porridge for breakfast!"

"That would delight me."

"Well," said the coffee, "there is a great deal of truth in what you say, but we can't all be the gay excitements of life, such as ice cream and cake and those jolly foods."

"But we warn people up and make them feel like work."

"I'd rather make them feel like play," the porridge pouted.

"You make a child have the strength to sit all morning in the classroom."

"I'd rather make a child sit with eating too much of me than always doing such worthy things right through my porridge life," the porridge protested.

"I know I'm sensible. I know I'm needed. I know I'm very helpful."

"But I'd like to feel I had more attraction. I'd like to feel I was a treat."

"That's it. I never feel as though I were a treat."

"And that's natural enough, for I never am a treat. I think I shall have to make the best of it, though."

"It's silly to worry about something one can't help. I can't help it if I'm porridge instead of ice cream."

"You're worrying very foolishly," said the coffee.

"You are that," said the scrambled eggs.

"You are that," said the toast.

"You are that," said the orange juice, waiting on the kitchen table, not far from where the objects upon the stove were talking.

A boy rushed into the kitchen followed by his sister.

"Ooooo," he said, "doesn't breakfast smell good! When will it be ready, mamma?"

"Almost right away," said his mother.

"Ooooo, goody," said the sister.

The things upon the stove all made pleasant little sounds to show how pleased they were.

"Did you hear that?" whispered the coffee.

"Did you hear that?" whispered the scrambled eggs.

"Did you hear that?" whispered the toast.

"Did you hear that?" whispered the orange juice.

"I'm really happy now," the porridge said. "No longer shall I call myself poor porridge."

"I shall call myself proud porridge instead."

Beauty?

Yes!

But Not Beauty Alone

Everyone who has come in to see the New Ford Cars, with their beautiful new bodies, has been impressed with their smartness, distinction and beauty. We're proud of them and the praise they have received.

But, as it has always been with every Ford Car, beneath the appearance are other great qualities that owners appreciate year after year. Unusual sturdiness, simplicity, the remarkable reliability for which Ford products have always been known—plus economy and low upkeep cost. In developing New Beauty for the New Ford Car, these qualities have not been overlooked, but now are greater than ever.

Come take a ride with us in this beautiful new car today.
