FARMINGTON ENTERPRISE
Farmington, Mich.
Friday, Nov. 29, 1912.

Detroit, Mich., Nov. 25.
Mr. Albert W. Kludt, who was for many years the eye expert for Koenig & Co., Jewellers, is now located in his own office and gives his patrons the benefit of his personal attention.

Animals Clever With Their Feet.
Goats are the most sure footed of our native animals. They can walk up right where the average human being would not crawl. Horses are the dirtiest treaders, however, though they cannot climb. No horse will step on a man if it can possibly help it. It is a standing rule in cavalry regiments that if a trooper is dismounted he must remain perfectly still, when the whole column passes over him without injuring him. Camels are careless on the other hand, and the man who came out unharmed from under the feet of a camel corps was not born to be run over by any kind of beast or vehicle.—Exchange.

A Royal Slip.
Considerable amusement was once caused by a slip of Emperor Nicholas' pen in accepting the offers of several companies of Siberian militia who volunteered for service at the front. The petition read, "We humbly lay at your majesty's feet our desire to be permitted to fight and die for the fatherland." The emperor is accepting wrote on the margin of the petition to his own hand, "I thank you sincerely and hope your wishes may be fully realized."

Origin of the Halo.
In the public places in Athens one of two thousand years ago the Greeks set up the statues of their gods and goddesses. To guard against the possibility of the rain staining the marble faces of their masterpieces they used to protect each with a large metal plate at the top of the head. These were mistaken by the pre-Christian artists for emblems of divinity. A painter to this day we see around the pictured heads of Christian saints the curious little ring which is known as the halo.—Exchange.

A Movable Town.
There is a town, Gartok, in Tibet, which moves twice every year. For three months of the year it is situated at the place where it is designated on the map. During the other nine months it is not there at all, but is about forty miles farther south, at a much lower altitude. Climatic conditions are the cause of this migratory habit. When the heat grows too intense for comfort the whole town packs up and, driving the herds of yaks, sheep and goats, moves up to the higher altitude, and the traders from India at once begin to drift in. Trade continues for three months; then, before the severe Tibetan winter begins the town moves back.

A Funny Eagle.
A Russian grand duke was once the guest of a German prince. It was early in the last century. In Russia the imperial double headed eagle is to be seen everywhere and on everything throughout the empire—stamped, painted, embroidered or sculptured. At that period the education of grand dukes was somewhat limited. This grand duke went out shooting in Germany and, among other things, shot a large bird. He asked an experienced huntsman who accompanied him what the bird was. "An eagle, your highness," said the hunter. "The grand duke turned on him in an irritated way. "How can it be an eagle," he asked, "when it has only one head?"

Cooking Accounts.
The word cook, used in the sense of "cook up accounts," is generally put in quotation marks, but the phrase has been almost long enough in use to give it indisputable standing. Smollett wrote of "cooking accounts" in 1751, and proofs were "cooked" a century earlier, but somehow "cook" remains what the dictionaries still call "coo-coo," though in this sense, while "coo-coo," which means to cook or boil together, has the status of a fully accepted word. The Romans used "concoquo" and the simple "coquo" alike in the metaphorical sense of pondering and devising, but the obvious metaphor of "cooking" accounts never occurred to them.

December.
"Nobody is worried nowadays by the fact that the twelfth month of the year is called the tenth, December," says a writer, "and no doubt even the ancient Romans soon got used to the anomaly when the new year was shifted back from March to January, though the old names of the months were retained. But there was one of them who made ingenious use of it—Lactantius, a rascally procurator at Lyons under Augustus. He insisted on having certain monthly payments made fourteen times a year, arguing, when December came round, that as it was the tenth month of the year and there ought to be twelve there must be two more to be accounted for."
Growth of Rocks.
Rocks do not grow in the sense that a plant grows. They may increase by accretion, and they may undergo chemical change. The old sea bed, being lifted up, becomes sandstone and limestone. The volcanic ash and lava, strewn over the plain become tuff, sand enough for building stone. The pebbly shore of a river becomes conglomerate. The simple mineral does grow, however, when it takes a crystal form. The sparkling prism of quartz increases from an atom to a crystal as large as a forearm by a process of addition and assimilation, wonderfully slow, but beautifully regular, exactly as crystals of ice form on the window-pane.
The Three Heaviest Men.
The three heaviest men of whom any mention is made in history were Miles Darden of Tennessee, Lewis Cornelius of Pennsylvania and Daniel Lambert of England. Darden died in 1857. When he died he was seven feet six inches in height and weighed over 1,000 pounds. There is no record of the date of the death of Cornelius, which occurred in Pike county, Pa., but the account says that he was born in 1784. When in the prime he measured eight feet two inches around the waist, was six feet tall and weighed 645 pounds. Daniel Lambert was an English freak who died in June, 1809. He was of average height, but weighed 788 pounds.
Not Eager.
"Are you ambitious to die rich?" "I'm not ambitious to die in any condition."—Detroit Free Press.
One Kind of a Good Time.
Some men's only idea of a good time is to see how much sleep they can do without.—Washington Star.

THE WAY TO LIVE.
Let me but live my life from year to year.
With forward face and unrelenting soul.
Not hurrying to not turning from the goal.
Not mourning for the things that disappear.
In the dim past nor holding back in fear.
From what the future veils, but with a whole
And happy heart that pays the toll
To you and age and travels on with cheer.—Henry van Dyke.

Care of the Eyes.
On rising in the morning the eyes should be bathed gently in cold water. Twenty passes are said to be decidedly strengthening. While using them closely they should be rested at intervals of an hour or two, for the straits of constant reading, etc., is like that of extending the arm at a certain height immovably. Imagine, then, the taxing of the eyes, which cannot complain save after years of irreparable neglect. When dust settles in the eyes warm water will soothe them of any inflammation.—Exchange.
