April 1 Final Day To Enter Poppy Posters

All students who are making "Poppy Posters" must turn them in to Mrs. Lulu Loomis by April 1. They will be collected April 2 and turned over to the judges' committee for marking.

Judges for the American Legion Auxiliary of Farmington, are Miss Helen Hard, Wells D. Butterfield, and Mayor Arthur Lamb.

Prize-winning posters will then be mailed to the department headquarters of the American Legion Auxiliary to compete for the State award.

A bake sale will be held by the Auxiliary on Saturday, March 28 at the A. & P. store at 2 p. m. —I. Lueke, Historian.

Jade Earrings Told on Her

By HELEN ST. BERNARD

FOR twenty-five years the annual call at "Strathmore School for Girls" had been the big event; then all the cadets from the nearby military academy came in their colorful uniforms of French blue; then sweethearts, fathers and mothers from home.

Tonight the college was in readiness for that day of days—tomorrow. At her window at the far end of the second floor hall Sally Cole, teacher of English and literature, sat looking out over the rolling campus bathed in a soft silver moonlight. Twenty years ago she had been a girl of Strathmore and had been the belle of the annual ball. She, too, had had her party dress—a white voile with lace-edged ruffles around the bottom. And it was twenty years ago tonight that the white and blue had sounded of out over the campus until the wee hours of the morning, and Sally Cole had danced nine dances with the tall blond cadet in blue; had walked with him beneath the oaks in the moonlight and eaten her ice cream and cake with him behind the palms in the gymnasium. He had liked her white dress, but most of all, he had liked her jade earrings, long slender pendants set in gold coils falling almost to her shoulders. He had said Sally was his favorite color. And he had kissed her that night and said he would come back.

Sally had never left Strathmore. Following her graduation she had been placed on the faculty. And she was smilingly tolerant of the whispered consultations long after the quelling bell had rung. They were rare and only once. . . she argued to herself.

She moved to her dressing table to arrange her hair when a dark, slender girl came in, radiant in a coral chiffon frock.

Alice Wayne was the school's harum-scurum and rules meant little to her. Sally knew of the happy-go-lucky father who was seldom home long enough to get acquainted with his lovely, motherless daughter. Alice showed her letters from Africa, Asia, Central America and recently, from Egypt.

"I thought I'd see you dressing for the dance, Miss Sally, dear. Alex is here, and I don't know what to do with him."

"Alex? queried Sally. "Which one of the swains is Alex?"

"Alex is my father. He landed in New York this morning."

"Oh, I am glad he is your father. I thought it might be another admirer arriving in addition to the three already here. Aren't you happy to see your father?"

"Oh, yes," drawled the girl. "But I hardly know Alex. He is a good old scout, but such a vagabond! But I do declare, Miss Sally, dear, I don't know what I shall do with him with Bobby and Hank and Earl to look after."

"Well, my dear, do not neglect your father. You are all he has, you know. Let the boys shift for themselves."

Sally smiled, with the despairing wisdom of youth.

"Alex is lecturing me something fierce" for having my hair shingled. Says he likes old-fashioned girls. Oh, Miss Sally, let me do your hair. Part it in the middle and coil it low on your neck. Please, Miss Sally. . . And you should have earrings."

Sally Cole smiled at herself in the mirror an hour later. Her usually sleek hair was softened over the ears and coiled low on her neck. Her dress was white, a lovely soft silken thing she had bought in New York. Sally always had a white dress. For a second her hand toyed with the jade earrings in her jewel case. Twenty years ago tonight she had worn those exquisite things. . . and then she was fastening them on her ears.

As she joined the other members of the faculty, Alice Wayne smiled her and came across the floor holding fast to the hand of a big blond man.

"Miss Cole, Alex. And Miss Sally, this is my father."

He looked straight into Sally's eyes, a questioning gaze. He smiled at her as he took her hand in his, and with the other hand, he touched the earring that nearly reached to her shoulder.

"Earrings of jade. . . a white dress. . . Strathmore. . . and those twenty years are bridged, I would have known you anyway, but the jade really proves you are you. I came back, twenty years ago, but you had not given me your name! I couldn't find you, but I never forgot."

"For the love of me, Alex, what are you talking about?" demanded his daughter.

"I mean, young lady, you can save a dance for your old dad along about the last. I will be busy up to that time. Here comes your young Loch-invar in blue. Run away, my dear, and we'll see you later."

Alice Wayne came into Sally Cole's room, long after the last guest had gone. She snuggled down in the big chair beside the window.

"I don't know what it is all about, Miss Sally, but Alex and I are ever so happy. Some one to lecture us and love us. We both need you. And I'm ever so glad that every person doesn't wear jade earrings. . . it is that is what made Alex fall for you tonight. Just think! What if he hadn't seen you first. . ."

"But he did, Alice. He saw them first twenty years ago. . . and he didn't forget. . ."

POLITICAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Political Announcement
To the citizens of Farmington:
When I decided to ask your preference for the office of Assessor I realized that I should likely be opposed by a man held in high esteem and with a long record of public service. However, I believe that I can bring to this office a knowledge of its present needs and a vision of the future that only a younger man can have. I feel also that if I am successful against such odds I shall have accomplished much more than if I had had less formidable opposition.

Taxes of any nature always seems to be a burden but especially so during a time like the present. A little investigation and discussion of our individual problem is sometimes enlightening.

The Assessor has no voice in setting the total amount of tax that must be levied for city purposes. That is the duty of the City Commission. It is his duty only to apportion the total tax among all the taxable units of property in the city as equitably as possible.

However, as a member of the County Board of Supervisors the man you select as City Assessor is partly responsible for the amount of money that must be raised by taxation for county purposes. If he performs his duties in full and attends the meetings of the Board he may have some influence on your taxes.

I am asking your support in the belief that a great many people are ready to demand some changes in the conduct of public business and that progressive and wide-awake men are needed to carry it on.

W. Allen Nelson.

Clarenceville Boy On Title Debating Team

John Kaufman of Clarenceville is a member of the Redford High School debating team, which last Friday night defeated Cooley High School for the Detroit title. He played a prominent part in the winning team's success, and will be one of the three debaters representing Redford High School in a state semi-final contest on April 3. A victory in this debate would place the school in the finals at Ann Arbor.

A crowd of about 500 heard the debate on the chain store question. John Kaufman formerly attended the Clarenceville school.

ESSEX

THE FINEST PERFORMING SIX HUDSON ENGINE BUILT

Competes with the LOWEST in Price . . . Challenges the FINEST in Quality

$595

Essex is the only low-priced car that follows the motor design of the highest-priced cars in using light-weight moving parts and in engine speed

This design enables Essex to develop more power at the same motor speed and the same power at a lower motor speed than the "Low-Speed" cars. It permits greater power in proportion to weight, better balancing of crankshaft loads, improved bearing lubrication, more efficient cooling and enables Essex motors to last longer at low speeds.

Essex introduces fine-car style and Super-Six smoothness to the low-priced field. It is strongly built to assure lasting satisfaction and enduring dependability. It challenges the performance of any six and matches the economy of cars most noted for low operating cost. It gives you Rare Riding Comfort for the first time at its low price.
