Danger That Led Japan to "Scrap" Whole Navy It is not generally known that the Japanese actually undertook of their own free will a complete scrapping of their navy 200 years ago. At the time the Spanish armada Japan was a great naval power, and for some years she went on increasing the number of her ships. Great conquests were made, and had the expedition lasted for a few years more Japan would have discovered Australia and have been the first nation to colonize it. But a great change came over affairs in the East. Spain and Portugal were sending their ships to that part of the world and were acquiring more and more territory. The Japanese saw that if they were defeated at sea the whole of their country might be taken from them. They therefore disarmed all their ships, and in 1638 passed the act of seclusion, which was in force for more than 200 years. This made Japan an absolutely closed country in which no foreigner could set foot. Japan ceased to make contacts, but she kept her own land intact.

Famous Tapestry The Gobelin tapestries originated in the work of a former dyer, named Gobelin, who in the Fifteenth century came from Reims to Paris, the family having discovered a marvelous secret dye which attracted great attention. In the sixteenth century to the manufacture of dyes was added the manufacture of tapestry, which founded the fortune of the family. Some of the family were granted titles of nobility and some became leading statesmen of France. In the reign of Louis XIV, the government took over the Gobelin tapestry manufacturers and they remain a state activity.

Long-Lived Moon Superstition Old foresters have the strongest opinions as to the influence of the moon on timber. In the royal ordinances of France for the conservation of forests, it was laid down that timber, especially oaks, should be felled only during the wane of the moon, and the belief—superstition, if you like to call it so—all persists both in France and England. The idea is that timber felled at these times is less liable to rot than when felled during the wax. The belief dates right back to Roman times.

WEST FARMINGTON The annual Graham reunion was held Sunday at Leland Grove on a site near Pleasant Lake. About 92 people were present. A pot luck dinner was served. The meeting was conducted by the president, Joseph Graham, and he was also re-elected for another year. Mrs. George Heliker was re-elected secretary-treasurer for another year. The next annual reunion will be at Mr. and Mrs. Grant Putnam's residence in Grand River ave, the third Sunday in August, 1932. Starr Heliker is spending the week with his cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Lowell Hunt, at Scotch lake. Mr. and Mrs. Smith of Detroit are spending a few weeks with Mr. and Mrs. Charles McCullough. Mr. Jack Small, who with his wife had been spending the week with Mrs. Small's parents, Mr.

and Mrs. Frank Pennell, has mysteriously disappeared. Mr. Small was driving a bakery delivery truck for the Farm-crest bakers Saturday evening. As he did not return either home or to the office a search was made. No trace of him has been found at this writing. Quite a number from here attended the Milford fair last week. They expressed themselves as well pleased with the entertainment, especially the public wedding Saturday night. Misses Luella and Florence Pennell spent last week with their cousin, Vera Graham. REDFORD FEATURE BASED ON NOVEL BY RINEHART Few modern writers have more "best-sellers" to their credit than Mary Roberts Rinehart whose recent fiction sensation, "Lost Ecstasy," comes to the Redford theatre screen Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, under the title "I Take This Woman." "Lost Ecstasy" had already equaled the selling success of Mary Roberts Rinehart's best-known books when Paramount contracted for the moving picture rights.
