MORTGAGE SALE—Default, having been made for more than thirty days in the conditions of a certain mortgage made by Emma Geo. Kreiter and Rose Kreiter, his wife, to The Farmington State Savings Bank, a banking corporation of Farmington, Michigan, dated the 15th day of June 1928 and recorded the 5th day of June 1928 in the office of the Register of Deeds for the County of Oakland in Liber 57 of mortgages on pages 563 to 565, on which mortgage there is claimed to be due and unpaid at the date of this notice for principal and interest, the sum of $1250.00, and the result of such default mortgage having elected to declare the whole of the principal sum of said mortgage due, and no suit or proceeding at law, or in equity, having been instituted to recover said sum, or any part thereof, secured by said mortgage. Now, therefore, by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, notice is hereby given that said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale at public vendue on the 25th day of September A. D. 1931 at ten o'clock in the forenoon, Eastern Standard Time, at the eastern entrance to the Court House in the City of Pontiac, Michigan, that being the place of holding the Circuit Court within said county of the premises described in said mortgage, or so much thereof as may be necessary to pay the amount of said mortgage, together with interest and all legal costs allowed by law, and provided for in said mortgage, including attorney fees, said premises being situated in the Township of Commerce, Oakland County, Michigan, and described as follows:
Lot No. 14 of Phillips' quarter Lake Subdivision, being the west half of the southwest quarter of Section 14, Town 3 North Range 4 East, according to the plat thereof recorded in Liber 15 of Plats, page 15 of Oakland County Register of Deeds office.
Dated June 15, 1931.

Remember the good old fashioned girl who was satisfied if the boy friend blew-in seventy-five cents on Saturday evening?

Former Secretary of War Davis was the victim of tear gas in Pennsylvania the other day. Owing to the fact that he spent the winter in the Senate, however, the effects of the gas soon passed off.

French Salt Derived

From Lakes Far Inland
Salt is so common and so inexpensive that one is apt to lose sight of its value and necessity. In certain parts of the orient salt is so scarce and so valued it is used as a medium of exchange. France has no salt mines; and, as far as the smooth table variety is concerned, she is entirely dependent upon imports. You see a famous brand of English packet salt in all parts of the country. But it is an expensive business getting it to every small town, and that is where the Etang de Berre comes in handy. It is on the road to Marseilles—you pass it away to your right—and it is the largest of all the Etangs. They are great lakes of sea water, fed, often underground, by the sea; and they are dotted along the Mediterranean coast from Marseilles to Spain. You find them again in the Landes, that flat, marshy stretch in the neighborhood of Bordeaux. Shallow evaporation pans, leading away from the Etang de Berre, and looking in the distance exactly like vast reservoirs, have been built, and these are dammed from the lake. They are then diked off, and dry air and blazing sun do the rest.

All History Recorded

In Scheme of Nature
Nature will be reported. All things are engaged in writing their history. The planet, the pebble, goes attended by its shadow. The rolling rock leaves its scratches on the mountain; the river, its channel in the soil; the animal, its bones in the stratum; the fern and leaf, their modest epitaph in the soil. The falling drop makes its sculpture in the sand or the stone. Not a foot steps into the snow or along the ground, but prints, in characters more or less lasting, a map of its march. Every act of the man leaves a self in the memories of its fellows, and in his own manners and face. The air is full of sounds, the sky of tokens, the ground is all memoranda and signatures, and every object covered over with hints, which speak to the intelligent.—Emerson.

Walt Whitman
Whitman was a great liberator, a great humanitarian, a great American, a great man; was he, therefore, a great poet also? Intellectually indolent, emotionally mushy, spiritually chaotic and formless, Walt Whitman is the greatest American now safely and securely enshrined and enshrined in the hearts of his countrymen not because of his poetry, but because of his patriotism.
There is a wonderful poetic fire in Whitman as there is in the life and work of every great liberator. But Whitman was not another Shakespeare nor another Milton nor another Shelley. If he is not of this immortal company, he is truly a great poet! Though so one need deny that he was a superb human being writing astonishingly human poems. Folio of prose poetry.—From "Our Changing Human Nature," by Samuel D. Schmalhausen.

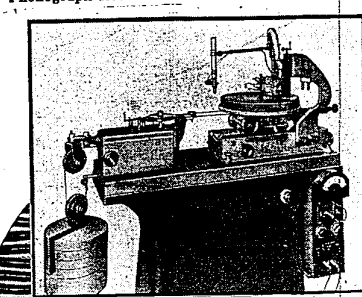

Sea Eel a Menace
There is a sort of sea eel which darts like lightning at a human victim and sinks its sharp teeth into an arm or ankle. A man would be helpless against one of these creatures were it not for a trick familiar to the South sea natives. In its lightning-like dive the eel gets any grip it can and holds on. Then it waits for the victim to weaken, when it will relax its grip and try to get a more advantageous one. All the attacked person has to do is to endure the pain until the fish opens its mouth. Then, if the man moves quickly enough, it is possible to escape to the surface by pushing the creature away.

Falling Power of Horses
Large horses are better than small ones for pulling heavy loads, tests at the Illinois agricultural experiment station have disclosed, although many horse owners have insisted that "good little teams" will outpull a big one, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. Trials were made with 144 different teams, and accurate measurements of their performance taken with a dynamometer. It was also found that a good disposition was an important factor in the animals' success as pullers, and skilful driving was found to be as necessary as good horses.

Ben Damp is Damp
Ben Damp, a rambling country mansion belonging to the Lovelace family, is perhaps about the most inaccessible house to be found even in Scotland. It is also one of the wettest. Rain falls almost continually. The nearest village is about eleven miles away, and the household is consequently, of necessity, self-supporting. Fish from the loch, cattle from the pasture, and game from the moor provide the staple sustenance of those staying at Ben Damp.

Electrical Term
The bureau of standards says that a lamp-man switch, also called a throw switch, is a electrically controlled double-throw switch. Using two of them, a light can be controlled from two places, such as upstairs and downstairs in the case of hall lights. A relay switch is electrically a double-throw reversing switch. Any number of four-way switches may be used with two three-way switches to control a light from any number of points.

Phonograph Records Have "Permanent Waves"

The introduction of electrical phonograph recording and reproduction is largely responsible for the present renewed popularity of the phonograph. The machine shown above, developed at Bell Telephone Laboratories in the course of basic researches on speech, takes electrical waves from a microphone and records them in wavy lines on a wax disc. The "permanent waves" shown at the left are simply the wavy grooves on the wax disc of a master phonograph record, photographed under a magnification of several hundred times.
