How George Washington found in Masonic fellowship the feeling of equality with his fellowmen which his high rank in military and colonial affairs prevented him from enjoying elsewhere, was related before a gathering of over a hundred Masons in Farmington Masonic Hall Monday evening.

The speaker, George E. Bushnell of Detroit, took Washington's life as his subject because of the approaching celebration of the two hundredth anniversary of the first President's birthday.

Mr. Bushnell, basing his address on documentary evidence unearthed by students of Washington's life and his connection with Masonry told of Washington's refusal to accept the offices of grand master of the Virginia lodge and of a proposed grand lodge of America, because he had never served as master of any local lodge. He recalled Washington's insistence, when he was attending Masonic gatherings during his service as commander-in-chief of the Continental Army, upon sitting in lodge simply as "a brother," and refusing to permit any special consideration toward him. Mr. Bushnell recalled that Theodore Roosevelt took similar delight in the equality of Masonic gatherings, and never was happier than when he sat in the ranks in a lodge presided over by the gardener of the Roosevelt estate at Oyster Bay.

One other aspect of Washington's life was emphasized by the speaker, the extreme youth of Washington, the fact that Washington shouldered many of his most trying responsibilities at an exceptionally early age, tasks that many men would hesitate to assume even in middle age.

"Our two greatest men, Washington and Lincoln, were alike prepared for their great achievements by experience, by heavy responsibilities," said Mr. Bushnell.

Music during the dinner was furnished by Farmington Community Band. The third degree was exemplified, afternoon and evening sessions of the lodge being held.

WEST FARMINGTON

A carnival will be held at West Farmington school house Friday, October 23. Everybody is invited to attend.

Several from here attended the address given by Prof. Howard McClusky of the University of Michigan faculty at a P. T. A. meeting at Walled Lake.

There will be musical service held at Walled Lake Baptist church Sunday evening, October 25 consisting of orchestra music, piano, and vocal selections given by local talent.

Several from here attended the North Farmington Auxiliary held at the Methodist church at Farmington.

Ronald Button of West Farmington is general chairman and head of the various groups of the seventh annual school and community fair under the auspices of the F. F. A. organization of Walled Lake Consolidated school. It will take place October 29 and 30.

Ronald Button and Dorothy Russell took part in a recent affair held at the Walled Lake Consolidated school when the seniors entertained the freshmen.

Great Painter's Humor

The saying "I sell my landscapes and give my figures into the bargain" is attributed to Claude Lorraine, the French landscape painter.

Laying Ocean Cable

Efforts to lay a cable across the Atlantic were begun in 1857, but it was not until 1866 that a successful attempt was made.

SPARKS CAUSE A FIRE

For the second time within a year, sparks falling on the roof of a home on Valley View avenue caused a fire, the latest one occurring Sunday afternoon. A passing motorist, Ed Killen of Clareville, saw the smoke and climbed to the attic, put out the flames with a fire extinguisher supplied by a neighbor.

Damage was small. The house is occupied by Donald E. Beard, new residents of Farmington. At the time of the previous fire it was occupied by E. A. Wagner.

The old-fashioned woman had to use the cellar for a cooler instead of the electric refrigerator but in those days cellars were coolers.

Phasant Perches On Roof Of Enterprise

Phasants apparently can read and believe in signs.

A hen pheasant perched on top of the Enterprise building Tuesday morning for about ten minutes, calmly observing passers-by and as far as outward indications were concerned, had not a care in the world.

Her nonchalance is attributed to the fact that a week previous a quantity of "No Hunting" signs was printed under the same roof where the bird had made its perch.

GEORGE E. BUSHNELL, DETROIT ATTORNEY, ADDRESSES MASONS

Relates Interesting Sidelights On Life Of George Washington Taken From History

FORMER GOVERNOR'S RELATIVES ATTEND MEMORIAL RITES

Seeds To Be Planted in Farmington To Perpetuate Memory Of Gov. Warner

A group of white pine seedlings is growing today in Higgins Lake Forest, and soon a number of similar small trees will be taking root in Farmington soil a few among thousands that will stand as a memorial to Farmington's three-time governor of Michigan, Fred M. Warner.

Mrs. Martha Warner, widow of the governor; Howard M. Warner, a son; Mrs. W. W. Slomum of Farmington and Mrs. Claire Gaskler of Pontiac, daughters, were among 100 relatives and descendants of Michigan executives who gathered at the forest near Roscommon Tuesday to plant the trees on 40-acre tracts set aside for the purpose. Each brought home a package of white pine seedlings for planting in the home ground. Those brought back to Farmington will be planted in the grounds of the Warner residence on Grand River avenue.

The Farmington party left Monday afternoon, arriving after a stopover, at Roscommon with the others at ten o'clock Tuesday morning. They visited the forest reserve headquarters and made an inspection of Roth nursery, named in honor of Philbert Roth, deceased, for many years head of the forestry department of the University of Michigan, and one of the University's most beloved teachers.

Value Of Trees

Talks were given by Harold Titus, member of the State Conservation Commission and Assistant Attorney-General William A. Richards, the latter representing Gov. Brucker. Mr. Richards said that the reforestation work is not merely of sentimental value but of great commercial worth, as an aid in developing Michigan's tourist trade, the second largest industry in the State.

The party proceeded from one 40-acre tract to the next, taps being sounded at each place. At the tract in honor of Gov. Warner, each of the Farmington party shared in parting the earth with "dibbles," and planting the seedlings, which are four or five inches high.

The tracts are marked by permanent metal markers with the name of the honored governor in raised letters.

AUTUMN BEAUTY

Trees in this vicinity are showing unusually beautiful autumn colors this fall, along all the highways. One particularly beautiful group of trees may be seen while driving south along Orchard Lake Road, below twelve mile road. In Farmington City, a striking tree of exceptionally vivid red to be seen at the E. A. Pink residence on Grand River a short distance east of the residence.
