WALLED LAKE TEAM ADDS KEEGO HARBOR TO LIST OF VICTIMS

Early Drive By Keego Harbor Nets Touchdown But Visitors Weaken Rapidly

By Robert Gaffney
The game Friday at Walled Lake between the Keego Harbor and Walled Lake, started out much differently than was expected. Keego Harbor received the kick-off and on a series of first downs carried the ball the length of the field a few minutes after the starting whistle for the first touchdown of the game. Their trial for the extra point failed.

Keego's blocking was as nearly perfect at the beginning of the game as could be hoped for. However, they failed to maintain the pace. Soon after the first score, Walled Lake determinedly started a successful series of touchdowns which they kept up for the rest of the game. In fact the Keego team was so demoralized that the reserve team replaced the regulars in the last quarter.

Touchdowns were scored by Ike Welch, D. Tuttle, Lloyd (Peanut) Eno and Art Harris.

Old Saying Explained
When we say that a man is driven from pillar to post we mean that he is constantly hurried and given no rest. The expression probably originated as "whipping-post to pillory," two old forms of punishment. The pillory was a board with holes for head and hands mounted on a post. It was last used in England a hundred years ago.

Best for Necklace
If you wish to restring a necklace use a violin string—this will last much longer than ordinary thread or twine. The stiffness of the violin string quickly wears off.

FRIENDSHIP RENEWED AFTER 50 YEARS BY TELEPHONE

A chance glance at a telephone directory paved the way to a renewal of friendship after fifty years for James P. Ramsay of Lowell, Mass., probation officer for Middlesex county in that state. Not being sure of the address of a friend, he looked up the name in the telephone directory and in turning the pages, spied the name of George Atherton. Many years ago he had worked with a young man of that name, but half a century ago they separated, due to a change of employment, and they had never met since then.

Believing that the George Atherton of Chelmsford, Mass., whose name appeared in the book, might be related to his former friend, Mr. Ramsay called the number and learned that it was his former friend. The next day they met and the friendship of half a century ago was renewed.

TELEPHONE PLAYS IMPORTANT PART IN RAILROADING

Unified Communication System Advantageous in All Phases of Transportation Service

The telephone is the heart of a railroad's communication system. It is the point through which the work of all the various departments is coordinated. The telephone service of the railroads is used not only as a means of communication by the employees of the road, but also by the railroads' patron.

"New Haven" Was First Big User
Communication is necessary between the general offices, division headquarters, traffic centers and shops. There must be lines connecting signal towers with railroad stations in the divisions in which the road operates, special dispatching circuits, message circuits for the use of freight and passenger stations, with connections provided for information and reservation boards. More recently, telewriter service has also been introduced.

In making telephone facilities available to the patrons of the road, one of the steps was to provide telephone booths in railroad stations. Now many railroads have telephone service available on limited trains for thirty minutes before the trains leave the station.

First of the large railroads of the country to make exclusive use of the telephone for train dispatching purposes was the New York, New Haven and Hartford.

H. A. Shepard, General Superintendent of electric transmission and communication for the "New Haven" talking of railroad telephone service, recently said:

Has Widespread Advantages
"Telephone service is in general superior to telegraph service for the various branches of communication on railroads and some of the railroads are arranging to expand their telephone plant with the view of handling their entire communication problem by telephone. For instance, the operation is faster and a greater amount of business can be handled with the same force; dispatchers' districts have been lengthened and in some cases consolidated.

"From the standpoint of personnel, the telephone has produced beneficial results on account of the more personal contact between the dispatcher and those to whom he imparts instructions, and this applies throughout the organization. The telephone has made it possible for the dispatchers to communicate direct with train crews at sidings as well as at stations when untended, thereby materially speeding up train service and reducing operating costs.

"Telephone operation for all branches of railroad service is expected to make possible greater economy, flexibility and improved service."
