Asks Injunction To Bar Tax Collection

Board to do was simply to go into court and ask for an injunction against Farmington Township's own treasurer, Mark D.
Bachelor, to prevent him from sending out tax bills or collecting any taxes in the Township this year.

When the Board members recovered from the shock, they expressed themselves in hearty accord with Mr. Utley that taxes are too high. They pointed out that by exercising stringent economy they have cut off from this year's budget $17,000, or nearly one-third of the total budget a year ago. They assured him that any suggestion whereby taxes could be reduced would be welcomed by them—but the matter of an injunction against Mr.
Bachelor, who sat composedly in his chair two feet away, was somehow lost in the discussion that followed.

Mr. Utley assured all present that his proposal indicated no personal reflection on Mr. Bachelor, whom he held in high esteem.

Mr. Utley left food for thought when he stated in the course of reading his speech before the Board, that the taxes on 99 acres in 1930 had been $27, and in 1930 were around $900.

Governor Brucker received him very cordially, Mr. Utley reported, took his petition with hundreds of signatures and listened with sympathetic interest to the Farmington man's proposal.

Shortly after his return, Mr.
Utley received from the Governor a letter, as follows:

"Dear Mr. Utley,
"You have just left the office after presenting me with the petition signed quite liberally by those living in Southern Oakland County and entitled as follows:

"We the undersigned real estate owners petition Governor Brucker to call a special session, for its object reduction of taxes, asking the Covert Law be repealed, all unpaid taxes be spread on the State books and be forever paid; all unfinished roads be taken over by the State, all roads hereafter built by the State."

"I shall take under advisement and carefully consider your petition."

"I congratulate you on the fortitude you have demonstrated in securing these signatures at the expense of great personal inconvenience to yourself. I do not know what will be best to remedy the condition of which you make complaint, but you may be sure that your petition will be given attention."

New Telephone Directory For Farmington Out

A new directory for Farmington and vicinity was issued this week by the Michigan Bell Telephone Co.

The new books consist of eight pages, printed all on blue card board stock. The last previous issue marked a departure from all predecessors in that the inside pages were of white paper, as in directories in larger towns. The December, 1931 issue is a return to the earlier type of book.

TALL POLES SUPPORT WIRES CROSSING RIVER

Thrice Normal Height, They Have Carried Telephone Lines for Two Decades

For more than two decades, two tall poles, each supported by local and long distance telephone wires crossing the Saginaw River at Mount Vernon, Wash.

Built in 1910 on the general plan of a suspension bridge, the crossing, 520 feet in length, is remarkable for the great height of these poles on either side of the river, each three times the height of ordinary telephone poles.

Mount Vernon-Ancones long distance wires and a lead-coated telephone cable containing wires that connect homes on the west side of the river with the Mount Vernon central office, are carried across the river by the span.

Each of the poles has a heavy double cross arm. Two strands of halfinch steel cable, carried over the top of the cross arms, support three fixtures spaced at equal distances over the river. These fixtures, in turn, each consisting of four cross arms strapped together with vertical angle irons, support the copper telephone wires and the telephone cable.

In spite of their twenty years' service and the constant heavy strain they are in excellent condition a recent inspection showed. Twice within the last 10 years these poles have ridden out on the span to make wire repairs.

The crossing was built by the Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company in 1910, but it is now a part of the West Coast Telephone Company's system, which acquired it some years ago.

RUNNING STOP SIGN AT IRON MOUNTAIN EXPENSIVE

Lansing Nov. 4—Running a stop sign in Iron Mountain cost Matt Toti, $71.40.

The traffic violation wasn't so serious but when Trooper Donald Hudley noticed blood on the running board of Toti's car when he was stopped and when the trail of blood led to a dead partridge and a fresh deer hide things began to happen. Toti paid a fine of $65 for the game law violation and also paid court costs of $6.40.
